5 Men Drown In Lake At Madison

SENATE SURE TO TEAR INTO WALL STREET

Attacks Still Popular As Ever In Congress--Probe Nearly Certain

NEW LAW MAY FOLLOW

Attempt To Determine What Influences Are Trying To Monopolize Credit

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1929 by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—Prospects of a senate investigation of the money market have passed beyond the talking stage. Definite plans for the inquiry are being made and it is difficult to see how it can very well be opposed either by the administration or anybody else.

Attacks on Wall-st are still as popular as ever in congress and when a senator demands an investigation of what is happening in the stock market, it is politically dangerous for any senator to oppose the demand, for few men in public life have ventured to defend the financial interests and particularly the speculative element.

The pressure for an investigation of how the money market is affected by speculation does not come merely from an academic interest such as members of congress have occasionally displayed in stock market operation and credit, but appears to have developed by the battle between the federal reserve board and the speculative element.

Some members of congress see a titanic struggle between the speculators and the board, with the latter trying to protect the credit resources of the federal reserve system from being invaded by the stock market operators. The mere fact that the federal reserve board has been for the last several months bitterly opposed in Wall-st has engendered suspicion in congressional quarters that perhaps the board does not have sufficient power to curb speculation.

WANT LEGAL REMEDY
The theoretical purpose of the inquiry will be to find a basis for remedial legislation but the actual motive is to find out just what influences are endeavoring to monopolize credit and to force current interest rates to a high scale.

The politician knows that there are far more persons borrowing money for commercial purposes than there are votes among the large speculators. And the members who can get something for the consumer at lower cost is always the nucleus of political campaigning. The large as well as the small business men of the country are just beginning to learn that an added item has gone into their overhead expenses—the higher cost of money.

Congress would in any event wish to penetrate the ramifications of a Wall-st operation but when it is backed up with a higher cost of living for the masses and the members who can prove that the high rate of interest brings higher cost of commodities—then there is a fertile field for political exploitation and the inquiry fever.

LITTLE OPPOSITION
When the resolution comes up for passage it is doubtful whether there will be many dissenting votes. The western and southern senators will press the issue and the eastern members will hardly be able to offer opposition for fear of being misunderstood.

The federal reserve board will be the center of interest because it has endeavored to fight speculative elements without asking for increased legislative power. Members of the board feel no additional legislation is necessary. This means that the board will stand between the radical elements in congress and the Wall Street groups who have been trying to thwart the policies of the board.

And even though the investigation does not lead to any legislation, it will force the hand of the federal reserve board again, just as the February warning is supposed to have been a direct result of the debate in congress and the threats to make mandatory some of the discretionary powers which the board has reluctantly exercised.

OFFICER FRACTURES HIS SPINE IN TENNIS GAME

Chicago—(AP)—Capt. J. W. Boltenbeck, instructor at the Citizens' Military Training camp at Fort Sheridan, was recovering from a spinal fracture suffered in a tennis match.

While serving, Captain Boltenbeck bent nearly double with the force of the drive and felt a sharp pain in his back. He played two sets subsequently, but later experienced pain. An x-ray revealed the fracture.

100,000 More Men Called To Arms By Nationalists

10 More Brigades Organized To Meet "Increasingly Serious" Situation

Washington—(AP)—George C. Hanson, American consul at Harbin, informed the state department today that small Soviet raiding parties have clashed with Chinese troops on Chinese territory near Manchuria station, Lahasusu and Pogranichnaya and that Chinese casualties have been about 200 so far.

Shanghai—(AP)—The Chinese Nationalist government had ordered mobilization of 10 additional brigades of Manchurian troops totaling 100,000 men and now views "the Sino-Russian crisis as increasingly serious."

The brigades will be assigned to duty on the northern frontier. Six

Troops Out After Riot By Strikers

Marion, N. C.—(AP)—One man was badly beaten and several other sustained bruises when 1,600 strikers at the Clinchfield cotton mill here early today prevented 400 non-union men from returning to work in the mill.

The disorders occurred at 5:15 this morning when pickets are alleged to have attacked the advance guard of workers attempting to enter the mill which has been idle for several weeks.

Immediately afterward Nat A. Townsend executive counselor to Gov. O. Max Gardner, who was sent to Marion Saturday by the governor to watch the situation this morning, telephoned Mayor Eugene F. Coston of Asheville, to mobilize the Asheville National guard forces and come at once.

Superintendent Henderson of the mill was badly beaten with blackjacks and clubs wielded by strikers and strike sympathizers of picket duty at the mill.

"Bring on your troops," they shouted almost in unison.

Albert Hoffman, organizer for the Union Textile Workers of America, who has been counseling peace, attempted to prevent trouble but he too was hooted down.

The strike at Marion has been on about six weeks. At first a comparatively few workers went out. Then the plant was closed down. Two weeks ago an attempt was made to take a number of non-union workers into the mill and a fight occurred which resulted in the arrest and fining of a dozen strikers. On last Friday deputy sheriffs attempted to evict a number of mill workers from company houses but met with resistance.

2 SOUGHT IN NORTH WISCONSIN STABBING
Rhinelander—(AP)—Onida, and Forest-of officials tonight were seeking John Conley and Lynals Sparks, who are said to have severely stabbed John Palubicki at Monice last Friday. The affair was not reported to authorities here until today.

The two men, who came to northern Wisconsin from Kentucky several years ago, are said to have harbored a "grudge" for Palubicki because the latter arrested Sam Conley, a brother of one of the accused, while he was an Onida-co deputy sheriff.

Although, suffering from three deep wounds, physicians today declared that his chances of recovery were excellent.

Flower Growers Seeking Blooms For Weekend Show

Flower lovers in Appleton and surrounding country are carefully watching their gardens these days to locate blooms they will enter in the fall show of the Flower and Garden society in Armory G next Saturday and Sunday. Flower gardens have improved wonderfully since the recent rains and exceptionally large and excellent exhibits are expected.

Flowers must be entered at the armory before noon on Saturday because judging will start immediately after 12 o'clock. A corps of workers under the direction of Mrs. D. J. O'Connor, show superintendent, will be on hand to take the flowers and enter them according to classes and varieties. A material change has been made in the arrangement of exhibits to facilitate judging and placing of flowers.

Permanent cards will be made up as the flowers are entered so the Flower and Garden society will have

BOAT UPSET; THREE BODIES ARE REGAINED

Witnesses See Launch Capsize But All Efforts At Rescue Fail

Madison—(AP)—Five men were drowned in Lake Mendota near the summer colony of Spring Harbor when a homemade launch capsized a quarter mile off shore shortly before noon today.

Three bodies had been recovered by 2:15 p. m., and a fourth member of the party tentatively identified. The known dead:

Robert Schaller, Paolo. Wis.
Walter Buergeisser, Blanchardville, Wis.

Lester "Barney" Davidson, Verona, Wis.

William Engelberger, a Madison barber, was reported by employees at the shop where he worked to have been a member of Davidson's party.

Witnesses said the boat, belonging to Davidson, suddenly capsized and all the men were thrown into the lake. Aid was rushed at once but too late; all the party had gone down.

The men had started out from the Davidson cottage at Spring Harbor, ostensibly to go fishing, when the accident occurred.

SEE BOAT CAPSIZE

Mrs. Anna Croxon, Madison, and Miss Freda Brown, Milwaukee, both saw the boat capsize. Miss Brown saw four men start to swim, and then sink, and Mrs. Croxon saw five men in the boat just before it turned over.

Harvey and Eugene Cohen, Chicago, who saw the boat go down, pulled to the scene and dived into the lake several times in an unsuccessful effort to recover the bodies.

One of the men is believed to be "Barney" Davidson, Verona, who owns a garage in Madison. Davidson owns a cottage at Spring Harbor, and four of his fellow townsmen have been his guests there.

This morning the Davidson boat, run by an old auto motor, was seen to have overturned. Davidson's mother at Verona said she did not know who was with her son.

Cries of the men attracted people on the shore. Two girls in a row boat were the first to go to their assistance, but when they arrived, all of the men had disappeared in the lake.

The Rev. George Grethens, Sauk City, and the Rev. Richard Rettig, New Glarus, who were camping nearby rushed to the overturned boat, but they also arrived too late to aid the men. When the university life saving boat arrived, it did not have proper equipment, and had to return to the shore for it.

SENATE CONVENES AND ADJOURNS THREE DAYS

Washington—(AP)—The United States senate reconvened today after its summer recess of several months. The tariff bill passed in May by the house is the order of business for the senate, but as the finance committee has not completed work on the measure, a series of three day recesses were started at once. These will be continued until Sept. 4, by which time the bill is expected to be ready for consideration on the floor.

Despite the advanced notice that no attempt at work be undertaken today, crowds filled the galleries and watched Vice President Curtis call the chamber to order.

The Rev. George G. Culbertson, associated minister of the New York-ave Presbyterian church, offered the opening prayer.

After being in session only three minutes, the senate adjourned until Thursday. It was one of the briefest sessions in the body's history.

23 Die, Many In Midwest Are Injured

Ten Drown, Eight Killed In Crashes, Four In Plane Wrecks

Chicago—(AP)—Twenty-three lives were taken by accidents yesterday in the middle west.

Ten were drowned, eight died in automobile accidents, and four were killed in plane crashes. Of those drowned, three were victims of an automobile accident near Minneapolis when their car was forced off a bridge and fell into a river.

Besides the fatalities, many more serious injuries were reported and several persons were rescued from drowning.

Charles T. Tracy, 42, Clarence W. Score, 30, and Ludwig J. Forbeck, 24, all of Minneapolis, were drowned when their automobile plunged through a bridge railing into the Mississippi river.

At Montevideo, Minn., August Flygare, and three of his sons, Stanley, 11, Lyle, 2, and John, 8, were killed and Mrs. Flygare and another son, 5, were seriously injured in an automobile collision. In another Minnesota accident, Arthur O. Nelson of Lincoln, Neb., was drowned in Pelican lake.

The plane crashes were at Scotts Bluff, and Sioux Falls, S. Dak. Charles Schaffer, pilot, and Miss Lucille Mayer, 28, and Frank Gaddis, 26, passengers, were killed at Scotts Bluff, and Earl Nelson, 25, flying instructor, was killed at Sioux Falls when his plane dived from about 100 feet. A student passenger escaped unhurt.

BURNED TO DEATH

In Illinois, Miss Zelma Witt, 24, and Robert C. McDonald were burned to death and Lester Feahling, 26, was seriously injured when Feahling's car was demolished by a railroad train. Three persons were killed in Chicago by automobiles, and another was probably fatally injured. A street car killed a small girl.

John Vertz, Jr., 25, was drowned in Pistakee lake trying to rescue a young woman. John Zadac, 22, was drowned here in a futile effort to rescue Peter Kuloch, 28, who had fallen into Lake Michigan from a navy pier. Joseph Niellinski, 22, of Chicago, was drowned in Duane lake, near Waukegan, and Marvin Bailey, 19, was drowned in a quarry at Cary, Ill. An unidentified man was found drowned in the Chicago river.

A lifeboat crew from the steamship Theodore Roosevelt rescued three men clinging to an overturned motorboat near Milwaukee and four boys were rescued by members of the Chicago Yacht club, who saw three of them holding to the bottom of an overturned boat in Lake Michigan. While bringing the trio to shore, a small boy, who had fallen off a pier, was picked up.

FRANCE PUTS D. K. ON EDGE AS AMBASSADOR

Washington—(AP)—The state department announced today it had been advised by the French government that the selection of Senator Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, as ambassador to Paris met with its approval.

At the request of President Hoover, Secretary Stimson instructed the American charge d'affaires at Paris to inform the French government that the president desired to appoint Senator Edge to the French post.

The French acceptance of Senator Edge was forwarded to the state department by Mr. Armand.

Thirteen Reds Arrested During Riot In Racine

Racine—(AP)—Thirteen Communist rioters—five of them girls—were in jail without bail today after being arrested in a street disturbance that broke out in Monument square here Saturday night.

The trouble began when they gathered on the same busy downtown corner on which they attempted to stage a Peace day demonstration some weeks ago. When told by police to disperse, the crowd turned on the officers. There were forced to surrender aid. The rioters, however, were not enough and the rioters were not hounded into patrol wagons and deputy sheriffs came to the scene.

At the police station, the officers were met by second mob, many of whose members had hurried to the scene in automobiles. The crowd was not dispersed until Under Sheriff Oscar Sands was severely beaten

Sun God At St. Paul On Record Hop

St. Paul, Minn.—(AP)—The Spokane Sun God, enroute to the Pacific coast, from New York, in its endurance and distance record-seeking flight, arrived over the St. Paul airport for refueling at 1:25 a. m.

Madison—(AP)—The endurance plane, Spokane Sun God, piloted by Lieut. Nick Manner and Art Walker, circled over Madison at 11:10 a. m., today, dropped a note, and headed for Minneapolis, where it will refuel.

Cleveland, Ohio—(AP)—The endurance plane Spokane Sun God arrived over the Cleveland airport at 6:45 a. m. today on a return flight from Roosevelt field, New York, to the western coast. The fliers dropped a note asking for 200 gallons of gasoline.

The plane reached here after a night of battling extremely rough weather across Pennsylvania, and in Eastern Ohio. It had reports to the airport here during the night said that the fliers had been forced to circle about Bellefonte, Pa., until the weather cleared sufficiently to permit them to continue.

"Give us 200 gallons of gasoline," their note read. "O.K. Sorry to have worried you last night. Sure was some storm outside of New York. Everything fine."

THIRTEEN KILLED IN RAILROAD SMASHUP

Seven Hurt When Passenger Train Hits Open Switch In Oklahoma

Henryetta, Okla.—(AP)—Thirteen persons were killed and seven others were injured, two dangerously, when a St. Louis-San Francisco passenger train struck an open switch on the outskirts of Henryetta yesterday.

W. A. Wolfe, engineer, and Henry A. Bryan, a fireman, both of Sherman, Texas, and 11 Negroes riding in a chair car, were scalded to death when the boiler of the locomotive exploded as the train plunged down an embankment.

Of the injured, Mrs. D. D. Taylor of Joplin, Mo., and Earl Benfro, baggage man of Tulsa, Okla., were in a serious condition. The others injured were Negroes.

J. C. Gooch, an extra brakeman, and a Negro porter escaped from the chair car by breaking the glass in a window. Approximately 500 feet of track was torn up.

Officials began an investigation today to fix responsibility for the wreck. Harry Webb, a section hand, said he had closed and locked the switch Saturday afternoon.

POLITICIAN'S HOME IS BADLY DAMAGED BY BOMB

Chicago—(AP)—A powerful bomb was exploded early today under the front porch of the summer home of Lawrence P. King, county Republican leader and sanitary district trustee. The bomb wrecked the front of the house and threw King and his five children from their beds. None was injured.

It was the second time in eight months that King's home had been the target of bombers. Another bomb wrought considerable damage last December at his home in Chicago. Today's bombing was in Justice Park, a suburb on the southwest side, where the politician and his family are spending the summer.

King, who was one of 15 persons indicted last winter for alleged graft in the affairs of the Chicago Sanitary district, told police this morning that he knew of no reason why the bomb was thrown at his house. He declared he would demand police protection from State's Attorney John A. Swanson.

BANDIT SHOTS WOMAN WHO IGNORED COMMAND

Galesburg, Ill.—(AP)—Answering a knock at her door early today, Mrs. W. H. Kitchen, who was expecting her husband, a railroad switchman, to return from work, opened it to encounter a strange man.

"Put up your hands," ordered the stranger.

"A. W. quit your kidding," replied the 25-year-old housewife.

The stranger answered with his gun. A bullet entered just above her heart, probably fatally wounding her.

The gunman fled but dropped a flashlight which is being examined by police for fingerprint clues.

LINER MAKES 6,432 MILES IN 101 HOURS

Two More Laps Remain On German Dirigible's Flight Around The World

FAR AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Airship Flies 15 Miles An Hour Faster Than Estimated By Eckener

Tokio—(AP)—With a journey of 6,432 miles across two continents officially logged, the great German air liner Graf Zeppelin was safely housed in the hangar at Kasumigaura naval air station at 7:07 p. m. Japanese time (4:07 a. m. Appleton time) today after a run of 101 hours and 53 minutes from Friedrichshafen.

Five hundred Japanese blue-jackets brought down the silver queen of the air on Kasumigaura field at 6:27 a. m. Forty minutes later they stowed her safely away until the start of her flight of 5,432 miles across the Pacific ocean to Los Angeles, next stage of her flight around the world.

The Graf will probably start for the Pacific coast of America on Thursday.

This flight over the waste stretches of the Pacific never yet traversed by an airship, marks the third stage of the globe-circling Graf's journey. Together with the run across the American continent from Los Angeles to Lakehurst, the Zeppelin must still fly nearly 8,000 miles to her goal on the New Jersey airfield from which she set out on Aug. 7.

A round of entertainments and festivities in the lavish tradition of Japanese hospitality began for the 29 passengers and the 40 officers and men of the Graf's crew as the last rope had been coiled and the last inspection given to the engines in the Kasumigaura hangar.

BREAK POLICE CORDONS

While immense crowds of excited Japanese broke again and again through police and military cordons, Dr. Hugo Eckener and Admiral Takarabe, Japanese minister of the navy, exchanged formal congratulations on the field.

The passengers, all of whom were well and in good spirits went through a brief customs inspection and then boarded a train for Tokio, 40 miles away. The Japanese ceremonial meal, traditionally extended to visitors, was served by airport and government officials before they left. It consisted in dried chestnuts, dried cuttlefish and saki, the national alcoholic beverage fermented from rice.

The officers and crew of the Graf were distracted from the strain of four days and six hours of constant strain and responsibility over the heart of Europe and the wilds of Siberia by an entertainment given by the commandant of the airport. They relaxed from the tension of the flight from Friedrichshafen by dining and watching the dancing of Gelsina girls, professional Japanese entertainers.

Meanwhile, the staff of American, German and Japanese engineers who had been waiting to go over the Graf's engines and replenish her stores silently got to work to prepare her for her transpacific flight.

FLY OVER TOKIO

Before landing at Kasumigaura field, the Graf made a courtesy flight over Tokio and Yokohama to satisfy the curiosity of the people. It was a spectacle never before witnessed in the Orient not even in Japan where modernization has been so rapid since the middle of the last century.

No airship as big as the Graf ever cruised the skies of the empire of the rising sun. Three navy blimps are the nearest approximation to her ever seen in Japan.

By a trick of fate the Graf was stowed away in a hangar built from German reparations payments.

Dr. Hugo Eckener probably will make another flight over Tokio before starting across the Pacific. The German embassy expected him to pass over the two-fold bridge which marks the entrance to the imperial

Burglars Loot Offices Of Six Appleton Dentists

RAIDERS TAKE DENTAL SETS, LOOSE GOLD

Loss To Professional Men Is Estimated At More Than $1,500

Offices of six local dentists were entered last Sunday night or early Monday by burglars and completed dental work, cash, loose gold scraps and leaf and other smaller articles were taken. While the actual value of the stolen goods will not total more than $500 it is estimated that the loss to the dentists will exceed $1,500 as a considerable number of bridges and plates, ready for delivery, were taken.

The gold is removed from these completed sets and sold and the amount realized is only a small part of the cost of making and fitting them. The dentists estimate losses at from $50 to several hundred dollars each, depending on the number of completed dental sets lost.

Local police were investigating the burglaries Monday morning although clues to the burglar or burglars were few. This is the third or fourth time that raids have been made on dentists' offices here and one theory is that the same man or group of men are behind the burglaries.

Entry was gained to three of the dentists' offices by jumping the locks while the other three were entered when the locks were picked.

Police Chief George T. Frits Monday morning said that the burglaries were committed between 9:30 Sunday night and 2:30 Monday morning because at those hours Officer Earl Thomas, who covered the beat where the offices were located, had made the rounds and tried the doors. The officer discovered the open doors on his second trip around his beat at 2:30.

LIST OF VICTIMS

The following offices were entered: Dr. H. L. Playman, 112 E. College-ave, door jimmied, lost small amount of cash, fountain pen, several completed braces and bridges, and a small amount of gold filings and gold leaf.

Dr. S. J. Ladner, 107 E. College-ave, door jimmied, lost small amount of loose gold and several pieces of completed work.

Dr. S. J. Kioeh, 104 E. College-ave, locks picked, lost small amount of gold and several pieces of completed work.

Dr. W. S. Foote, 110 E. College-ave, lost considerable gold leaf and filing and large amount of completed bridge and brace work. Actual loss was estimated at about $100 while the loss to the doctor will run into several hundreds of dollars.

Dr. R. G. Van Susteren, 112 W. College-ave, lost large amount of loose gold and several pieces of completed work.

Dr. O. R. Busch, 101 N. Morrison-st., lost small amount of loose gold and several pieces of completed work.

GET $1,400
Green Bay — (AP) — Two robberies here over the week end netted burglars more than $1,400, according to police today. Yeggs who knocked the combination off the safe in the H. C. France dry goods store, escaped yesterday with between $600 and $700 in cash and a like amount in checks.

Gold valued at $15 was stolen from the office of Dr. C. C. Comee, dentist.

TWO HELD IN ANOTHER KANSAS CITY BLAST

Kansas City — (AP) — A terrific explosion, which firemen said was of incendiary origin, wrecked a new one-story brick garage building at Fifteenth-st and Forest-ave early today. The blast shattered windows a block distant and was heard in many parts of the city.

William Klugman, owner of the building, and his son, Himie, were held by police for questioning. No one was injured.

Two weeks ago today three firemen were killed in a drug store fire and explosion at Sixty-ninth-st and Prospect-ave. An investigation of the alleged arson plot has resulted in the arrest of four men, two of whom are under indictment for first degree murder. The others are held without bond on state murder charges.

D. M. Carey, accused of being the leader in the plot, committed suicide last Friday shortly before he was indicted.

KILLS WIFE, 4 CHILDREN AND TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

Royal Oak, Mich. — (AP) — Hans Peter Nielson of Royal Oak, killed his wife and four children with gas fumes and took his own life with poison after setting fire to his house here early today. Firemen who broke into the flaming house found Mrs. Magdell E. Nielson, and her four children, Nels, Hans, Jr., Bertha, S., Paul, 6, and Bodell, 2 dead in the bedroom. A gas jet in the house had been opened.

NO LOCAL GROCERS AT NATIONAL MEET

DRY SAYS HE'S DRY BUT COPS ARE TOLD THAT HE'S ALL WET

Chicago — (AP) — Whether dry is wet is a matter for court decision. Some one phoned the Des-Plaines-st police that "this fellow Dry is all wet," and detectives went over to Albert Dry's place. There were insinuations that it was a beer flat.

"I'm a dry," said Dry, "and this is a dry place. Anyone who says differently is all wet."

"Dry up," said the detective, "and come with us for a dry."

HOUSE TARIFF BILL IS GIVEN TO DEMOCRATS

Hundreds Of Rate Changes Are Approved By Republican Committee

Washington — (AP) — The house tariff bill, carrying hundreds of rate changes approved by the 11 Republican members of the senate finance committee, moved another step in its long legislative journey today with its submission to the 8 Democratic committee for their consideration.

The partially revised measure will not be made public, however, until tomorrow.

Debate on the bill was to have begun today in the senate under the two months recess agreement reaching June 19, but the finance group was delayed in its work and will require another week or more to rewrite the administration provisions before reporting the measure. Under an agreement between party leaders, actual debate will not start until Sept. 4.

Meanwhile, the Democratic committee members, who were excluded from the committee room after a month of public hearings in compliance with the custom whereby the party in power works alone in actual tariff rate-making, will compare the committee rates with those approved by the house and lay plans for the long floor contests ahead.

The administrative provisions, embracing the flexible tariff clause and other sections as controversial as the rates themselves, are to be completed by the committee majority in another week. Then the entire senate membership will be given an opportunity to study the whole bill, as rewritten, before the debate begins in September.

SEE PLENTY DEBATE
Some senators, like Borah of Idaho, a western Republican independent who will be heard from frequently in the impending struggle, believe there is no chance of sending the bill to the president before the regular session begins in December. Senator Watson of Indiana, the majority floor leader, however, thinks it will be out of the way some time before then, while Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the finance committee, has forecast mid-November as the time of its approval by congress.

Democrats have promised not to delay the measure unduly, but no one knows what the outcome will be should they and the Republican independents who hold the balance of power combine in an effort to keep the revision limited to their own desires.

Despite the disapproval of the export debenture and stock transaction tax proposals as amendments to the bill by the finance committee Republicans, these riders undoubtedly will be discussed at length on the floor. Those controversies alone may take several weeks.

MAJOR CHANGES
Among the important changes in rates approved by the finance majority are:

Reduction of the house tariff on Cuban raw sugar from 2 1/2 cents a pound to 2 1/4 cents. The present rate is 1 7/8 cents.

Elimination of the 3 cent increase voted by the house in the duty on raw wool, leaving it at 31 cents a pound.

Increases in the house duties on wool wastes, cotton textiles, agricultural products.

Reduction of the present rate on automobiles and trucks and busses of the lighter type. The house did not change this duty.

Restoration to the free list of shingles and cedar lumber, which the house made dutiable, and the transfer of the free list of manganese ore and logs, existing rates on which were not disturbed by the house.

Increases in the house leather duties and retention of the proposed duties on hides and shoes, all of which are now admitted free except a few kinds of leather.

GREAT TENOR IS EAGER TO ASSIST COUNTY CRIPPLES

Offers To Help Artillery Band - Raise Money And Benefit Concert

Invitations have been sent to officials of two score cities in the Fox river valley to attend the benefit concert for crippled children to be played by the 15th Field Artillery band, assisted by Serge de Zanco, famous tenor, at Pierce park Tuesday evening, Aug. 27. The invitations were sent by Mayor A. C. Rule.

This concert is donated by the band members in order to raise money to help the cripples. When de Zanco was told the purpose of the concert he was eager to sing here but he would not come for any other cause unless his usual fee of over $1,000 was paid.

Arrangements for de Zanco's appearance were made by E. F. Mumm, director of the band, who had worked with the famous Italian singer in Chicago several years ago.

De Zanco came to America under contract with the Chicago Civic Opera Co. but difficulties soon arose and the tenor severed his connection with the Chicago organization and he has been singing concerts all over America. He is in great demand and reviews by music critics indicate he is one of the greatest singers ever heard from an American platform.

In Milan, where de Zanco made his debut, he is regarded as one of the finest singers Italy has ever produced. This same sentiment has been expressed by a number of Americans qualified to pass judgment.

An admission fee of 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children will be expected from those who attend. The National guard, assisted by members of the band committee, will endeavor to collect the admission fees. Every dollar except the small amount necessary to defray the expense of the great singer's visit here will go to the crippled children's fund administered by the Civic council.

K. OF C. CONVENTION EXPECTED TO DRAW 5,000 TO MILWAUKEE

Supreme Knight Predicts Meeting Will Be Greatest In Order's History

Milwaukee — (AP) — Hundreds of Knights of Columbus and other visitors were pouring into Milwaukee today in advance of the opening tomorrow of the organization's supreme convention. Sessions will continue through Thursday.

Although there will be but 450 delegates, some of them coming from Canada, Cuba, Mexico, Porto Rico and Central America, Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody, Grand Rapids, Mich., who predicts the meeting will be the greatest in the order's history, expects some 5,000 persons to attend.

The Wyandotte commandery of Detroit, 400 strong, arrived by boat today. It was accompanied by its band and drill team.

Pre-convention activities began Sunday, when the fourth degree was conferred on 181 knights. A formal dinner, attended by 600, followed.

Addressing the dinner, Mr. Carmody discussed the order's activities in boy guidance, war work and education. Commenting on the work done during the World war to give some comfort to the men at the front, he said "too many of us forget that the war is not over for those boys who came back sick and broken in mind or body." He said that the $44,000,000 collected for war work was not exhausted until 1927 and that all of it went for service men.

OTHER SPEAKERS
Others addressing the dinner were district Master J. A. Kuipers, De Pere; John F. Martin, Green Bay, deputy supreme knight; Supreme Master J. H. Redden, Denver; Leo Creiger, Sioux Falls, S. D., and the Rev. Joseph R. Huemer, Milwaukee, and Richard Hennessey, Milwaukee.

An impressive religious ceremony will mark the opening of convention tomorrow. Following a procession from the residence of Archbishop Sebastian G. Messmer, the Rt. Rev. Paul P. Rhode, bishop of Green Bay, will celebrate a pontifical high mass, assisted by 50 members of the clergy in Wisconsin. The Most Rev. Henry J. O'Leary, archbishop of Edmonton, Alta., Ca., will deliver the sermon. In addition to the clergymen assisting the celebrant, several hundred members of the clergy will be seated in an improvised sanctuary in the convention hall, as well as 300 white surpliced altar boys. One thousand nuns also will be present.

Following the mass, Gov. Walter J. Kohler will welcome the knights. The closing feature of the convention will be a Holy Name society rally in the Marquette university stadium Thursday night. More than 30,000 persons, all of whom will carry lighted candles, are expected to attend. Quinn O'Brien, Chicago atorney, will speak.

Queen Rayon Takes Throne Once Held By King Cotton

Lowell, Mas. — (AP) — King Cotton no longer is monarch of all he surveys in this century-old cotton textile centre. His reign, dating back to the foundation of the community, has been long and generally prosperous, but a new ruler is threatening the throne—Queen Rayon.

New demands and new markets in the cloth manufacturing field are causing Lowell to adapt itself to altered conditions. Today, at least four of the city's major factories are turning out 5,000 to 30,000 pounds weekly of this comparatively new material.

More significant, perhaps, is the assistance which the Lowell Textile institute, state school, is giving the textile industry in its study of the new field. As far back as 1898 instruction was given in the basic laws underlying the manufacture of artificial silk. Thus, when industry finally recognized the value of these fiber products, graduates of the schools found no great difficulty in entering into manufacture of rayons. Research still is being carried on by graduates and the field of dyeing.

GOES ON VACATION
William R. Kreiss, municipal court reporter, left Monday on his annual vacation. He will be gone for two weeks. During his absence his work will be taken care of by Mrs. Herman Berge, Jr., county court reporter.

Marshall C. Graff, recently elected commander of the state department of the American legion made his first public address as head of Wisconsin war veterans when he talked at the homecoming and celebration at Iola, Monday. The celebration started Monday night. Governor Walter J. Kohler was speaker on Sunday's program.

15 SPANIARDS DROWN AFTER SHIPS CRASH

Surviving Mate Tells Story Of Tragedy Resulting From Collision

London — (AP) — Fifteen members of the crew of the Spanish steamer Ogonzo were drowned yesterday when their boat was rammed and sunk by the British tug King's Cross in the North sea, 30 miles off Humber. The King's Cross, badly damaged, picked up the remaining members of the crew.

The Ogonzo was struck amidships and sank in six minutes, the crew of 25 having no time to launch its boats. The King's Cross picked up eight members of the crew who clung to a lifeboat and two others struggling in the water.

The drowned included the ship's captain and all officers with the exception of Second Mate Ugaldia. The survivors were landed by the King's Cross at Grimsby. The King's Cross was badly damaged.

Second Mate Ugaldia said he was on the bridge with Captain Sandina at 8 o'clock a. m., when he saw the lights of a ship approaching and heard short blasts from the siren.

Almost immediately the collision occurred, the Ogonzo taking a big list and rapidly sinking. He went with others to try to launch the starboard lifeboat but dived overboard when he realized the effort was hopeless. He and others gathered about one of the Ogonzo's upturned lifeboats and clung to it until rescued.

PANIC OVERCOMES CREW
"I saw the captain diving into the sea but that was the last I saw or heard of him," said the mate. "The scene was terrible. Men were shouting and screaming and I shouted to them until I became almost too hoarse to whisper."

"I and four more of our crew clung for about an hour to the upturned keel of one of our boats before the King's Cross rescued us. I saw the chief engineer and the chief mate clinging to a piece of wood. They drifted away and were lost. Steward Juan Lands had a wonderful escape. A wave carried him to the mast. When he was picked up about two hours later only a foot or two of the mast was showing above the water."

"Our limbs were absolutely frozen and we were terribly exhausted when picked up."

Captain G. Anderson of the King's Cross, said he was asleep at the time of the collision and the force of the impact threw him to the floor of his bunk. "Mate Gardener was on the bridge," he said, "and he told me he did not see the Ogonzo until he was right on top of her. It was then impossible to avoid collision."

"The Spanish ship must have sunk like a stone because when I came on deck all I could see was her stern light."

Captain Anderson said his boat cruised for two hours after the last man was picked up without finding further sign of life.

The Ogonzo was bound from Bilbao to Middlesbrough with a cargo of iron and ore.

Adoysius Stoegebauer and John Henzkill returned Sunday from a week's fishing trip on the northern lakes.

74th BOMB THIS YEAR SET OFF IN CHICAGO

Chicago — (AP) — The 74th bomb of the year in Chicago exploded early today in the front hallway of a three-story brick building on Diversey-ave. Families living in the two upper stories were thrown from their beds, but were not hurt. The damage was about $2,500. The owner blamed a former tenant with whom he had quarreled.

ARMED OUTBREAK IN AUSTRIAN REGION

1 Killed, 62 Wounded In Attack Of Anti-Socialists On Socialist Group

Vienna — (AP) — One person was killed and 62 were wounded, 12 seriously in fighting last night and early today between members of the Socialist Schutzbund and the anti-Socialist Heimwehr at Saint Lorenzen. The Heimwehr, armed with a machine gun and with snipers firing from the tower of the town hall, killed one Socialist and injured those 12 whose wounds were regarded as grave. Other casualties were divided between the two factions.

The Socialists, who were participating in a party banquet, were taken by surprise, believing the Heimwehr members to be holding a demonstration at Theodor. They claimed to have been unarmed and to have attended the feast unprepared for trouble.

The fighting was the result of the Socialists scheduling a speaker who was distasteful to Heimwehr members. The speaker attempted during the Vienna riots of July, 1927, to proclaim a Socialist dictatorship. Handbills were distributed yesterday morning to wives of Socialists warning them their husbands would encounter difficulties if they attended their feast.

The little Styrian town was in an uproar during the conflict and gendarmes were rushed to restore order. A temporary truce finally was established while the mayor of Saint Lorenzen conferred with the rival faction leaders after the order of withdrawal from the scene of conflict, neither wishing to be the first to leave.

$7,500 WAITING FOR PERSON WHO TIPPED OFF DRY OFFICERS

Washington — (AP) — Despite its lure for most folks, $7,500 is lying in the treasury awaiting a claimant. That is the amount which can be paid, under the 1922 tariff act, to the person who gave information to the federal authorities which led to the seizure at Detroit of the yacht Margo, owned by Bert A. Massee of Chicago, and chartered by Louis Menzies of Detroit.

The federal authorities alleged that they found 40 cases of choice liquors aboard the craft, and Massee's check for $30,000 was required to redeem it.

Under the tariff act, a person giving information to the government leading to the recovery of "any duties withheld, or any fine, penalty or forfeiture incurred," is entitled to 25 per cent of the amount—in this case $7,500. But no one has claimed it, although the "tip" to a disgruntled member of the crew to whom $7,500 might be considered worth the asking.

Another story, which, like that one, has official backing, is that the original information came from a woman who had been a guest on the yacht and left the party at Detroit. In this story, however, it has not been made entirely clear whether the "tip" was intentional or accidental, or whether her financial situation is such that $7,500 would be less attractive than the chance publicity in connection with such an incident.

TRIO CLINGS TO UPSET BOAT UNTIL RESCUED

Milwaukee — (AP) — Clinging to an overturned motorboat for two hours in the roughest water seen on Lake Michigan in weeks, three Chicago men Sunday were rescued in an exhausted condition and brought here.

They are Raymond Prescott, 65, and his sons, A. E. Prescott, 30, and L. R. Prescott, 25. They had left Chicago for a vacation cruise to Sturgeon Bay late Saturday. After taking on a supply of fuel at Racine, they headed northward once more.

The accident occurred seven miles south of Milwaukee. They were sighted by the Chicago-Milwaukee excursion steamer, Theodore Roosevelt, which put out a life boat under command of First Mate Thomas Griffith, which picked up the trio.

Their boat was later brought into Milwaukee harbor by a coast guard crew commanded by Capt. William Kincaid.

SNOOK'S PLEA FOR NEW TRIAL UP TOMORROW

Judge Grants Day's Delay To Permit Defense To Pre-part For Hearing

Court House, Columbus, Ohio.—(AP)—Judge Henry L. Scarlett continued the hearing on a motion for a new trial for Dr. James H. Snook, until 9:30 tomorrow morning after a brief hearing today to a motion for a continuance filed by defense attorneys in which they claimed they had been given insufficient time to prepare for the hearing.

The defense attorneys had sought a delay of at least ten days, declaring that they had not been able as yet to obtain affidavits in support of their contention that "one or more" of the jurors who last Wednesday found Snook guilty of first degree murder for the killing of Theora Hix, his co-ed sweetheart, had been prejudiced against him from the start.

WON'T EXTEND TIME
E. O. Ricketts of defense counsel, objected to a delay of only one day, but Judge Scarlett refused to lengthen the time.

The hearing today started with the finding of an affidavit by defense counsel charging that at least a portion of the jury was prejudiced, that a demonstration in the court room following prosecutor John J. Chester's closing arguments had influenced the verdict, and that the 23 minutes the jury used in reaching a verdict was insufficient for a proper consideration of the case.

Judge Scarlett referred to "your own demonstration" in addressing the defense attorneys, and John F. Seidel, one of the former Ohio State professor's attorneys, demanded to know what he meant.

"I mean your bringing the relatives of the defendant into the court room in sight of the jury on the closing day of the trial," Judge Scarlett replied.

The relatives referred to were Mrs. Helen M. Snook, wife of the defendant, and his mother, Mrs. Abner Snook of Lebanon, Ohio.

COLUMBIA DAM IS BOOMED FOR NEXT BIG U. S. PROJECT

Congress Will Be Asked To Provide For Development
Of Mighty River

Seattle, Wash. — (AP) — With the Boulder dam project out of the way congress will be asked next December to undertake an even greater task—the development of the mighty Columbia river.

The project would include the development of at least 2,250,000 horsepower of hydro-electric power, the reclamation of 2,000,000 acres in the Columbia basin of central Washington, and the construction of locks that would make possible the navigation of the Columbia river from the Pacific ocean to the Canadian border, a distance of 746 miles.

As the first step, the Columbia River Development league, representing many Washington cities and towns, will ask for the construction of a power dam at Grand Coulee in central Washington and the gradual reclamation of the Columbia basin project.

A dam 220 feet high would produce 1,250,000 horsepower for sale and 1,000,000 horsepower for pumping water for irrigation. A dam 350 feet high would enable production of 2,000,000 horsepower for sale and 1,600,000 horsepower for pumping purposes.

The size of the dam would depend on the report of the United States army engineers under Maj. John S. Butler, who have been planning for the development of the river. These plans call for a series of power dams and locks which would open the river for navigation to the border.

From the international line to the sea the river drops 1,350 feet. Estimates place the total electric energy possible for development at 10,000,000 horsepower. The sale of this power would be expected to pay for the entire improvement program.

The league will ask congress to pass a bill similar to the Boulder canyon measure. No work would be started until a market for power was assured.

Fewer Foreign Cars Use Oneida-st, Census Shows

Although the total number of automobiles passing the intersection of N. Oneida and Washington-streets on Saturday between 7 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the afternoon in either direction, was larger than a year ago, the number of out-of-state cars using Oneida-st as a thoroughfare has decreased.

Chris Deltgen of the Appleton fire department took his annual traffic count last Saturday and found that since the opening of Highway 41, and the re-routing of Highway 41, the number of foreign cars had dropped nearly a third, as compared with figures in preceding years.

In 1923, 710 foreign cars passed the intersection, while last Saturday, 253 out-of-state machines were counted. The total number of cars passing the intersection in either direction was 4,421 as compared to 4,184 the previous year. Twenty-two states were represented in the count taken, while last year 18 states were represented.

The number of out-of-states cars passing the intersection has been decreasing since 1923. In 1921, 695 foreign cars were counted, 1925, 665; 1926, 511; 1927, 359; 1928, 271 and this year, 253.

CALVES ARE INSPECTED BY SELL AND TOWSLEY

Gus Sell, county agent, and C. D. Towsley, leader of the Kaukauna 4-H club, visited the various members of the club last week to inspect the animals they are raising as projects. Most of the calves were found in good condition Mr. Sell said. Advice on the care of the animals was given by Mr. Sell.

As was assured bonds on the land and contracts for power would protect the United States to funds advanced.

The pumping project is one of two methods suggested for the reclamation of the Columbia basin. A survey of the basin has been proposed and backed by many. Advocates of the Grand Coulee dam believe that the power project will pay for the reclamation and would be more readily accepted by congress. The cost of the 350-foot dam and power plant and the reclamation of 2,000,000 acres is placed at $195,000,000 by the league.

President Hoover, when secretary of commerce, said that the Columbia river should be developed at the earliest possible moment and that the sale and lease of water and power would pay for the entire project. The president also has predicted that improvement of the river would double the population of Washington.

Want This Year's Seymour Fair To Be Best Ever Held

HUGE ANNUAL EXHIBITION IS TO OPEN TODAY

Horse Races, Revues And Fireworks On Attractive Program

BY W. F. WINSEY
Seymour—Preparations have been completed to make the Seymour fair one of the greatest exhibitions of the fair organization in the history of the fair organization, and the special attractions, speed events, and fireworks will be the best ever offered in this section of the state.

The horse and cattle barns, sheep and swine pens, poultry buildings, exposition buildings, manufacturers' buildings, and all buildings and departments, are filled to capacity. There is never any question about getting enough exhibits without so-called but there has always been difficulty about housing all the exhibits that come voluntarily. Notwithstanding the new buildings that have been erected each year, finding a place this year for all the exhibits is a serious problem. The entry list was completed on Saturday and the exhibits were set in place Monday.

The predominance of entertainment features of the fair, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, will be Robinson Revue, Bach Sisters and Company, The Isikawa Japs, Olympia and Jules, and the 120th Field Artillery band, and the fire works. The band, Bach Sisters, Olympia and Jules, and Isikawa Japs, are to entertain day and night during the fair.

In the speed events 49 horses are entered. The 2:24 trot and the 2:24 pace are set for Tuesday; the 2:24 pace and the 2:30 pace, and the three-year-old trot or pace, Wednesday; the 2:28 trot and the 2:15 pace or trot, Thursday.

The educational and entertainment parts of the fair program have been planned by Secretary George F. Fiedler as attractions for people of all ages, tastes and hobbies. Each visitor will find on the grounds, a department, an attraction, or a performance for his entertainment day and night.

DEMAND RETURN OF CASH IN KENOSHA STRIKE CASE

Kenosha—(P)—On the basis of facts brought out in the investigation of Judge E. B. Bogan at Madison, the general strike committee of the former employees of the Allen A. Hosier company today wrote letters to former District Attorney Lewis W. Powell and former City Attorney Clifford E. Randall, threatening them with taxpayers' suits unless they returned to the county treasury, within 10 days, "months if legally secured and illegally expended."

The demand on Powell amounts to approximately $7,500, and includes $7,000 alleged to have been expended for private detectives in 1928 and $500 given Powell by the county board in 1928 for damage to his home inflicted by a bomb.

The demand on Randall was for "illegal fees received as special prosecutor in the Schmitt case," amounting to $750.

ATTENDED 1859 FAIR; BACK AGAIN THIS YEAR

Galesville—(P)—Three pioneer settlers who attended the first Tripeau-co fair in 1859 will be here for the opening of the 71st annual exhibit tomorrow.

The fair has been held annually with the exception of one year since 1859, and is the oldest county fair in the state. This year it runs from Aug. 20 to 24.

ARTILLERY BAND TO PLAY AT SEYMOUR FAIR

HOLD MAN AND WOMAN ON STATUTORY CHARGE

Mrs. Ethel Kleppin, 28, Freeport, Ill., and Frank Bierlich, 23, are being held by Sheriff Fred W. Giese at the county jail here pending arraignment in municipal court Monday afternoon on charges of lewd and lascivious conduct. The pair were arrested Saturday at Kimberly by Sheriff Giese. They have admitted living together as man and wife although Mrs. Kleppin has a husband living in Freeport, according to Sheriff Giese. The husband has been notified and was to arrive in Appleton Monday.

CHARGES AGAINST NEGRO ARE AIRED FOR SECOND TIME

A. Sigman Appears As Voluntary Attorney For Colored Man

The second preliminary hearing of Arthur Wilson, 21, colored, of Durham, S. C., who is charged with assault with intent to rape and assault with intent to do great bodily harm, opened Monday morning in municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg. The case was not ended at noon and was to be resumed Monday afternoon.

Wilson, arrested after John Kersten, 40, Appleton, had been struck down and an attempt made to attack his 15-year-old daughter, maintains his innocence. He was arrested and bound over for trial after a preliminary hearing several weeks ago but gained his release last week on a writ of habeas corpus granted by Judge Edgar V. Werner in circuit court on the petition of Attorney A. Sigman, appointed by the court to defend Wilson.

The writ was granted by the judge when he ruled that the previous hearing against the Negro had been postponed more than 10 days without his consent and that the docket entry of the case failed to show that a bond had been set to give the defendant a chance to gain his freedom.

Immediately on the granting of the writ, however, the Negro was rearrested on order of Stanley A. Sigman, district attorney. The writ automatically cancelled Sigman's commission as Wilson's attorney but he volunteered his services and appeared at the preliminary hearing Monday morning of his own accord to defend Wilson.

GRAF LANDS AT TOKIO TO END 2ND LAP

Air Liner Makes 6,432-Mile Trip In 101 Hours—Is Ahead Of Schedule

palace as a gesture of courtesy to the emperor.

The appearance over Tokio marked, unofficially at least, end of the second lap of the Zeppelin's round-the-world tour which began at Lakehurst, N. J., 9:40 p. m. Appleton time, Wednesday, Aug. 7, with the first lap completed Saturday, Aug. 10, at 7:03 a. m. with landing at Friedrichshafen. The 4,200 miles was covered in 55 hours and 24 minutes.

TWO MORE LAPS

Ahead of the Graf Zeppelin lay two more laps before completion of its world tour, from Tokio to Los Angeles—which as the Graf flies should be about 5,470 miles—and from Los Angeles to Lakehurst, about 2,500 miles, or 7,970 miles total.

The average speed of the Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen to Tokio was 64 miles an hour. This, when it is considered that but three of the dirigible's five motors were kept running during most of the trip, was exceptionally good and about 15 miles per hour in excess of what Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Zeppelin's master, had estimated it would make.

The Zeppelin's sighting over Tokio occurred just 45 minutes after it circled the giant Japanese hangar at Kasumigaura, the Japanese Naval air station. The dirigible remained but a few moments over Kasumigaura, and then headed for Tokio, capital of the land of the rising sun, to while away the hours until evening when the expected drop in temperature would permit landing.

NEARLY 800 MILES

Rain and fog on the last 800 miles of her journey brought a slight alteration in the Zeppelin's course and delayed its arrival several hours beyond sanguine early estimates. After leaving the Siberian mainland she flew well down the west coast of Hokkaido northward to the main islands of the Japanese group.

At a point about 550 miles from her goal and slightly east of Cape Kamui, Dr. Eckener requested permission of the communications minister to alter his course, because of bad weather conditions in the direction of Saiko Islands, west of Honshu.

He asked to cross the southwestern arm of Hokkaido in the direction of Shirayama on the main island. He then followed the eastern coast of Honshu down to the capital, passing over Shioyama, at 1:30 p. m. (10:40 p. m. Appleton time), to the hangar awaiting the ship, 40 miles away. The permission was given immediately.

Throughout the Graf's flight from Friedrichshafen communication was maintained almost constantly with either European stations, Asiatic stations, or finally Japanese stations, so that hardly for an hour was any one unaware of the Zeppelin's location. Most of the messages from aboard the Graf were signed "all's well aboard."

ROUTE FOLLOWED

Roughly speaking the trip was made from a point north of Moscow to the approximate position of Yakutsk, on the Lena river along the approximate location of the 62nd parallel, east of Yakutsk the dirigible turned south nearly along the 140th meridian to reach Nippon, Tokio and Kasumigaura.

Blasts of sirens and factory whistles announced that the Zeppelin had been sighted over Tokio. Crowds of office workers and others immediately swarmed into the streets, clamored onto the roofs and took up whatever points of vantage offered.

Ten minutes later the great airship with its escort of eight planes hovering about like flies about an elephant appeared over the central part of the city, low enough so that the crowds and the words Graf Zeppelin appeared clearly visible.

Comparatively little cheering was heard, but the crowds clapped their hands and waved as the giant vessel passed overhead and disappeared in the direction of Yokohama. It returned 25 minutes later and headed back to Kasumigaura to be berthed.

At Kasumigaura a light summer haze made visibility poor but full-throated "danzas" arose from the waiting crowds when finally the giant dirigible was sighted in the distance, with the sun flitting on its side.

ESCORTED BY PLANES

As soon as the ship was seen four naval planes and the Europa, in which von Huenefeld flew to Japan from Germany, soared up and went out to meet and the three other aircraft already accompanied it.

As it passed over the field for the first time the cheering and waving of handkerchiefs was almost frantic. Strains of the German national anthem, begun by a band, were hardly audible.

The Graf Zeppelin probably will start on the third lap of its round-the-world tour Thursday, taking approximately four days for the trip to Los Angeles. The trip completed today, while representing its longest traversed distance, did not represent the Graf's greatest flying time. Its first westward crossing of the Atlantic, completed in October 13, 1928, took 111 hours and 48 minutes to travel approximately 6,300 miles.

GERMANS ELATED

Marvel Crosson Leading In Women's Air Contest

Calverton, Calif.—(P)—Led by Miss Marvel Crosson, 18 fliers in the Santa Monica-Cleveland women's air derby passed over here at 8 o'clock a. m. today in their flight to Phoenix, Ariz., via Yuma, Ariz. A ship flown by Claire Fahy of Los Angeles, was forced down by a leaky gasoline tank. Mrs. Fahy said she would leave as soon as repairs could be completed.

A report received here said Plane No. 61 flown by Thea Rasche, famous German pilot, was forced down at Holtville, a small town about 15 miles east of here. The ship was believed damaged slightly in making a landing.

San Bernardino, Calif.—(P)—Eighteen young women aviators contestants in the $25,000 women's air derby, took to the air again shortly after 6 o'clock a. m. today after a controversy which for a time had threatened to break up the race had been ironed out.

Vera Walker, Los Angeles pilot, was first to put her plane in the air, starting at 6:10 a. m. Mrs. Keith Miller of New Zealand, was second, two minutes later and Neva Paris of Great Neck, N. Y., third. Thereafter the others gracefully and easily swept into the air at regular two minute periods, climbing high into the early morning haze to surmount the San Bernardino mountain range, 10,000 feet above sea level.

Other fliers, in order of their starting were: Amelia Earhart, Opal Kunz, Margaret Perry, Ruth Egan, Edith Foltz, Gladys O'Donnell, Ruth Nichols, Thea Rasche, Blanche Noyes, Claire Fahy, Louise Thaden, Marvel Crosson, Florence Barnes, Bobbie Trout and Phoebe Omie.

A nineteenth contestant, Mary von Mack of Detroit, was not among today's starters, having failed to reach San Bernardino yesterday. She landed at Montebello, near Los Angeles and returned to Santa Monica to await the decision of race officials as to her status.

8,000 People At Second Annual Water Carnival

Approximately 8,000 people jammed the streets of Fremont Sunday afternoon and evening to witness the second annual Water Carnival on the Wolf river, presented under the auspices of Walter Emdriss. A program of games, races, floats, stunts and fireworks was presented.

The day's activities opened with a baseball game between Shiocton and Fremont. The former team defeated the home nine by a score of 10 to 5.

Boat races in which the latest model speed-crafts took place opened at 2:30 in the afternoon. The races were conducted according to divisions and classes.

In the Class B division, Earl Fabricius of Waupaca won first place; Robert Pfeifer of New London, second, and R. Burger of Fremont, third. The boats covered the four and one half mile stretch up and down the Wolf river in 11 minutes, 20 seconds.

Horace Hurlbut of Oshkosh took first place in the Class C division. Second place was awarded Harold Laven of Oshkosh, and third to R. Petengrell of Waupaca. The time was 9 minutes, 33 seconds for the four and one-half miles stretch.

Floats of every description took part, and presented a beautiful spectacle of lights and floats. The fire works continued until 9:30 in the evening, while the boats gilded up and down the Wolf river, passing beneath the bridge which was filled to capacity with onlookers.

The float entitled, "The Old Mill," entered by Fader Bros., was awarded first prize. The boat was decorated to represent an old mill. Second place went to a float depicting the Statue of Liberty, entered by six Fremont girls. Third place was awarded to a group of boys who took the part of Indians, "The White Swan" float was given fourth place.

FIRST MASS READ BY APPLETON BOY AT LOCAL CHURCH

The Rev. Mark Stier Returned Recently From Six Years' Study In Rome

The Rev. Mark Stier, O. M. Cap., son of Mrs. John Stier, 626 W. Lawrence-st., celebrated his first solemn mass at 8 o'clock Sunday morning at St. Joseph church. Father Mark has just returned from Rome, Italy, where he spent six years studying.

The Rev. Dominic Meyer, O. M. Cap., Marathon, served as deacon and the Rev. Urban Miller, O. M. Cap., Mount Calvary, as subdeacon. The Rev. Father Stier's brother, the Rev. Herman Stier, C. P. J. C. D. of St. Gabriel's monastery at Des Moines, Iowa, delivered the address.

Father Mark, a member of the Capuchin order, was sent to Rome to take post graduate work in preparation for his doctor's degree in philosophy, which he received from the famous Gregorian university in Rome, conducted by the Jesuit fathers. The Rev. Father Stier left Italy on July 18, and after a brief trip through southern France sailed from Havre on the Rochambeau. On the second day out the Graf Zeppelin was sighted on its return trip to Friedrichshafen.

Sunday a dinner in honor of the Rev. Father Stier was held at Hotel Northern and after a visit with his mother, he will go to Marathon, where he will teach philosophy.

HUMAN MILLIONS RULED BY BABY

Terre Haute, Ind.—After hearing Captain Kirov Harris, native Australian, talk about the wonders of married life in Tasmania, we'll stick to the good old orthodox method.

"A Tasmanian bridegroom can't philander," says the captain, "because part of the wedding ceremony has the bride's father knock one of the front teeth from his new son-in-law's mouth."

"Also the married man wears on his back 'marriage' scars," made by his friends. The back is cut and the place filled with mud so that the scar will be more visible.

"You can't hide a scar, for the man who wears a shirt is regarded with suspicion. So there's no flirring in Australia among the natives."

WONDER HE'S ALIVE

"Did you do as I prescribed—eat nothing but baby food?"
"Yep, doc—I ate four marbles, a handful of sand, a penny, two match-ers, and swallowed an old key ring, but I don't feel any better,"—Judge.

REPORT PARAMOUNT AND WARNER BROS. TO MERGE

Los Angeles—(P)—The Examiner today said a merger of Warner Brothers Motion Picture corporation with Paramount Pictures Inc. was being considered. The merger would be completed within the week, and gave Jack L. Warner, west coast head of the former organization as its authority.

Warner said he would leave for New York tonight to arrange the details.

"I cannot say at present that the papers have been signed," Warner was quoted as saying. "Until these conferences (in New York) are completed, I cannot divulge the details of our plans."

"The proposed union" Warner continued, "will bring together about 2,400 theatres throughout the country. This will include approximately 2,000 theatres controlled by Public and Paramount, and about 400 controlled by Warner Brothers."

The impending merger, when consummated, will involve the combination in one corporation of more than $400,000,000 in holdings. Warner said the final papers are signed, Warner said, a parent company will be formed to control the merged units, which probably will be known as Paramount-Warner Brothers corporation. He stated that this company would be governed by a board of directors, and probably headed by Adolph Zukor or Harry M. Warner.

Committee Meets
Members of the fire and water committee met in city hall Saturday afternoon. The completion of several sections of water main was recommended by the committee.

Farm Board Acts To Aid Cotton Men
Tries To Prevent Over-Supply In Order To Keep Up Price Of Crop
Washington—(P)—The federal farm board announced today it had tentatively agreed to make "certain financial advances" to cotton cooperative associations to assist in the movement of this year's crop.

"The effect of the secondary loan by the federal farm board," the announcement continued, "will be to permit the cooperative association to make final settlement with the member growers when the latter desire to sell his cotton, without forcing that cotton on to the market at a time when buyers may already be over supplied."

"From the federal intermediate credit banks and the federal farm board, the association will receive advances equal to 90 per cent of the fixed value. To this amount the cotton associations will add 10 per cent from their own capital reserve; will pay in full the grower who is in distress and must have money, and will at the same time be able to merchandise the cotton in an orderly fashion as the spinning mills of the world require it."

Carl Williams of Oklahoma, representing cotton interests on the board, in commenting on the announcement, said, "this is just exactly what the cotton growers want."

The board, he said, was ready and willing to go as far as the cotton growers might want on such a basis.

AFTER CONFERENCES
This decision was reached, the board said, as a result of a number of conferences with officials of the American Cotton Growers exchange.

"The association," the board announcement said, "are now able to obtain loans from the federal intermediate credit banks to the amount of 65 per cent of the value of the cotton."

"The federal farm board's proposal to loan an additional 25 per cent—a total of 90 per cent for the two government agencies—on cotton on which a definite value has been fixed by hedging in the future markets."

The total volume of advances of this sort to be made by the federal farm board will be limited only by the actual requirements of the cotton cooperative association. It is expected that the sum involved for this year's marketing operations will run somewhere between 5 million and 10 million.

APPOINTMENT REPORT
Edgar Markham, for more than a decade the Washington correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer Press-Dispatch, today was named assistant to Chairman Legge of the federal farm board, in charge of press relations.

WORLD MOOSE LODGE GATHERS IN DETROIT
Detroit—(P)—Representatives of Moose lodges from all parts of the United States and Great Britain were in Detroit today for the forty-first annual convention of the Supreme Lodge of the World.

The convention was officially opened this morning, presided over by James J. Davis, secretary of labor and director general of the order.

Plans to construct a child city in Wales, near Cardiff, similar to one maintained at Mooseheart, Ill., were announced last night at a banquet given in honor of the British delegates. Representatives of the 112 British lodges at the convention plan a study of Mooseheart. Pledges of $325,000 were received toward the establishment of a boy's village at Mooseheart, for the segregation of boys between the ages of 8 and 12.

DEFEATED PARTY HEADS TO DECIDE FALL NAVAL PARLEY

Labor Government Will Be Threatened By Tory Dissolution From Scheme

BY MILTON BRONNER
London—Some time this fall, if all goes well, two men of good will, President Hoover and Premier Ramsay MacDonald, will sit down together in the White House and try to form a plan which will enable the United States and Great Britain to agree upon a common naval program, and also to cut down their naval expenditures.

They will have the same object—the furtherance of peace. They will speak the same language, this Quaker President whose very religious faith makes him hate war, and this religious Scot who spoke for peace even amid the storm of the late war.

But President Hoover will have the easier job. The American people stand almost solidly behind him in his aspirations. His party has control of both houses of Congress and even the Democrats want to see the naval question amicably settled.

POSITION IS SHAKY
Ramsay MacDonald is not in such a happy situation. The British people wish him well, but he has no clear majority in the House of Commons. Any time the Tories and the Liberals combine, they can throw him out of power.

The Tories are almost sure to be against the naval program upon which he and President Hoover agree. The Tories have given lip service to the matter of naval parity between the United States and Great Britain, but it must be remembered that W. S. Bridgeman, Secretary for the Admiralty under Baldwin, and a typical die-hard Tory was the one who wrecked the Geneva naval conference called by President Coolidge.

When and if MacDonald goes back to Parliament with an agreed program, he will have to face the fire of Tory guns. Sir Stanley Baldwin is the nominal leader of the Tories, but it is believed his days are numbered. He has led his party to two smashing defeats. Already there is a struggle for his place between Neville Chamberlain, who was lately Tory Minister of Health, and the half-American, Winston Churchill, former Chancellor of the Exchequer.

LOOK ASKANCE
Many Tories prefer the duller Chamberlain to the more brilliant Churchill. They look upon the latter as an adventurer. He fled from the Tories to the Liberals and held office. He hopped back to the Tories and once more held office. He has held office almost all his 55 years of life. In fact he has held nearly every cabinet post except Prime Ministry—which he now is after.

Since the Labor government came into power Churchill has led all the attacks. He will be sure to lead the onslaught on the Hoover-MacDonald program. He is by nature and descent a fighter. His great ancestor was the famous general, the first Duke of Marlborough. His favorite theme is war and he has written fine books on the subject. Whether they like him or not, the serried ranks of the Tories are expected to follow him in this fight.

The fate of the program will, therefore, depend upon the Liberals. If Lloyd George, who led his nation to victory but nevertheless hates war, is satisfied with the Hoover-MacDonald program, the Labor government will live and will put it over.

In the meantime, the Tories have already begun their campaign. Although President Hoover the other day held up the construction of three cruisers when Premier MacDonald ordered suspension of work upon two 10,000 ships, the Morning Post, organ of the Die Hard Tories, at once jumped into the breach with articles and editorials calculated to make retired Indian colonels and rich dockers shiver.

The main line of Tory attack will be that Great Britain needs a great force of fast cruisers of limited sea range which, based at British ports and possessions in all the seven seas, can safeguard the merchant marine in time of war. They will point out that this applies not only to vessels carrying British products to foreign markets but, more vital, to British vessels bringing food and raw materials to Great Britain. They will hammer away at the theme that the last war showed that a complete blockade of England would starve out the country in about three weeks.

WAR'S IN AIR
When they think of war, they will not necessarily think of the United States. They will think just as much, and probably more, of France and Italy. Both those countries in the famous Harding naval conference in Washington agreed to limitation of big capital ships, but fought and won their thesis that the smaller ships and the submarines should not be limited. Ever since then, France and Italy have been building small cruisers and submarines. And Great Britain has a wary watch on them.

So when MacDonald talks with Hoover, he will have to keep one eye on his House of Commons. He must especially bear in mind that he will have to win the favor of the Liberals. Lloyd George will be the key man who can make or break the Hoover-MacDonald program.

Half-American, mostly Tory, 100 per cent fighter, Winston Churchill, above, will lead the attack on whatever plan President Hoover and Premier MacDonald may make for naval reduction.

WORK OF AMATEUR MAY FREE "LIFER" FROM STATE PRISON

Student Of Criminology May
Free Michigan Farmer After 11 Years

Lansing, Mich. —(AP)—A humanitarian interest displayed by a Lansing lumberman in a life's story of being the victim of injustice, may bear fruit after 11 years pursuit of the truth.

And Albert Eichorn hopes that the harvest gained from the unrelenting efforts of Elmer W. Hammond to ascertain the truth may mean his freedom from a life cell in the state prison at Marquette, Mich.

The story of Albert Eichorn, former wealthy Michigan farmer sentenced 11 years ago to life imprisonment for murder, is not new. It has its counterpart in many others that the world has viewed with well founded skepticism.

But the story of the ceaseless activity of Hammond, Lansing lumberman and amateur student of crime, in behalf of the man whom the state courts held was responsible for the death of 18-year-old Beatrice Epier of Alma, Mich., is interesting.

Eichorn stands near the threshold of freedom because of the unusual interest displayed by Hammond, who was neither friend nor acquaintance at the time Eichorn was convicted of first degree murder. Impelled by a belief in the doomed man's story of his innocence Hammond used his own funds, and later enlisted the aid of friends to obtain substantiation of the man's claim of innocence.

He now believes this has been gained through an affidavit from Mrs. Anna Gilsen Mimnaugh of Kenosha, Wis., in which she admits she perjured herself when testifying against Eichorn as the star witness of the prosecution.

INDIVIDUALITY AND THE MOVIES

Maybe the real "trouble with the movies" is that they are doing their work too well. It seems so when you read the words of a critical minister of Albany, N. Y. He brings this indictment against film dramas: "We do not have to use the mind to understand them. We take a comfortable seat and the story is interpreted for us, every quip and turn, with action. People often inject their own personalities into those of the characters they see in motion pictures, and pattern their lives after them. They are living a part of their lives by proxy."

The same criticism might be made of the "legitimate" drama or of fiction, or of written history. It is natural for susceptible minds, tinged with hero worship, to imitate characters they see on the stage or read about. The real evil goes farther, and is chargeable against human nature in general. "Our trouble is," adds the critic, "that we take things ready made. We are prone to use the old forms. We subscribe to the political opinions of parties without knowing what they are. They are not really our own convictions. We do the same thing with religion. The only religious convictions that mean anything are our own convictions."

It becomes harder and harder, in a standardized and conforming world, to be an individual. And yet, individuality is the one thing most worth while—a person thinking his own thoughts, making his own choices, being his own best self as he sees it, building his own life by his own efforts.

SAVING THE OLYMPIA

The effort being made for the preservation of the cruiser Olympia is a worthy one. The Olympia, it may be necessary to remind a forgetful age, was Admiral Dewey's flagship at Manila Bay. It stands for the spectacular and daring feat which won the Philippines for the United States. It also stands, as much as anything can stand, for the Spanish-American war.

That, as Theodore Roosevelt once remarked, was "not much of a war, but the only war there was." It looks distant and small, back beyond the bulky figure of the World war. Yet it was heroic and notable in its time; it was the most unselfish war this country ever fought; it played a big part in the awakening of the sleeping American giant and the appearance of the United States on the international stage as a world power.

There must be war memorials as long as there are wars and memories of wars. What more fitting memorial of the Spanish-American war can there be than that old ship?

SPARE THE TREES

The Massachusetts Art commission wanted to cut down four elms that have stood on the Boston Common for nearly three centuries. The idea was to afford a better view of the state house from Tremont street. They said it "demanded the vista for its supreme beauty."

Chairman Long of the Boston Park department thought otherwise. "Never so long as I have any authority will those trees be touched," he declared. That settled the matter, for the present, at least. Probably public opinion will support the park policy rather than the art policy.

What is art, anyway? What is beauty? The well known poem of Joyce Kilmer might be adapted to suit the occasion:

I think that I shall never see
A building lovely as a tree.
And when the tree is huge and venerable, with memories and associations
accumulated through several generations, its merely man-made structure
seems petty and insignificant in comparison.

PATENT INFRINGING

The Radio corporation of America has lost the suit filed against it in December 1927 by the Dubilier Condenser corporation. A judgment involving $20,000,000 in back royalties and affecting 95 per cent of the radio manufacturers in the country was sought against the defendants.

The suit charged the Radio corporation with infringing on patents owned by the plaintiffs for manufacturing instruments for radio machines which eliminated the necessity of the storage battery and made it possible to operate from the ordinary household electric light socket.

The plaintiffs had worked on their device for some time prior to 1923. In 1924 they put the first of these attachments on the market. Patents had been applied for long before that. A few companies bought licenses for manufacture. Most companies, however, including the Radio corporation ignored the patents.

In bringing suit the Dubilier company decided to attack the largest company involved in order that the question might be decided once for all. The judgment calls for an accounting of the books of the R. C. A., declares the patents valid and states that they have been infringed. The judge in the case, recognizing its importance, asked for ample testimony and spent enough time on the case to get at the facts. The outcome should make patent-infringing less popular from now on.

EDUCATION ABROAD

An American family of good education was visited during the past year by nephews from Bulgaria. The boys' parents were American missionaries who have lived, taught and worked in southeastern Europe for many years. This was the first time the uncles and aunts in the United States had ever seen the nephews, 13 and 17 years old.

Last fall the boys were put in public schools in this country. The younger, who had never been to school, made the third grade very easily and stood at the head of his class. The elder boy, who had been in various schools in Europe, was able to do in one year the same amount of work on which most boys spent three school years. He came to America with four languages at his command—English, taught him by his parents; Bulgarian, learned from associates in that country; French and German, taught him most thoroughly in European schools.

These two lads were a revelation to their relatives here, none of whom had done anything spectacular in school or college, although all had made satisfactory records. Perhaps more American youngsters should spend their early years abroad. There seems to be a thoroughness in the training received there which is not often matched here.

STRENGTH IN OLD AGE

The Cunard liner Mauretania has been surprising the world. At the age of 22 years, after a few mechanical replacements and modifications, she proves herself almost as fast as the brand-new German Bremen, queen of modern liners, embodying in every detail the latest ideas of marine engineers for power and speed. Twenty-two years, it may be added, is not really a venerable age for a ship, though warships nowadays are soon outdated, and there is a tendency to scrap liners almost as lightly.

It was not so in the old days. Then a ship was good for a lifetime. There are sailing ships still anchoring occasionally in American ports that have seen more than half a century of service. The tiny sailboat in which a French sportsman recently finished his circumnavigation of the globe was 30 years old.

The Mauretania's demonstration is a reminder of other recent surprises of the same sort. The airplane that made the marvelous endurance flight in St. Louis was an old craft when she started, and she stood the gruelling test better than any other plane had ever done. A census of motors of all kinds used in this country by land and water would show a surprising number dating back near the beginning of the century. The idea that everything grows useless in a few years, and has to be scrapped in the interest of efficiency, is one of our post-war fallacies.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York. Atop the 34-story building on the site of old Madison Square Garden an artist is laying out a municipal wax works.

The artist is Dwight Franklin, a native New Yorker, and his models are figures prominent in the city's history from the days of Hendrik Hudson to the times of Jimmy Walker.

Franklin has been commissioned to model in wax a score of historical tableaux for the new Museum of the City of New York, now being built in upper Fifth avenue. The scene of Peter Minuit buying Manhattan island from the Indians is almost finished. So, too, are a number of others, including the Revolutionary war episode of Nathan Hale, and the first inauguration of George Washington.

It is not difficult to reconstruct such old-time incidents, Franklin said. What bothers him most are the scenes of later days, as yet preserved largely in the memory of those who lived them.

It is difficult, for instance, to find a woman's dress of 15 years ago. Now merely passe, pre-war fashions in time will be as quaint as the costumes of Martha Washington.

Then there's the Irish hod-carrier with his duddie in his mouth and his hod on his shoulder. It was he who started the city growing toward the sky and therefore his place is important. But he gave way to the steel-riever as the typical builder. He lives only in cartoons, and not so many of those.

So Franklin, who is 41 years old, is depending on his own memory for the scenes that came in with the century and for some of those of the '90's, when he played in the streets of the east side.

LANDMARK
Sun-tanned shoppers in Fifth avenue, looking for summer bargains in department stores, scarcely noticed the two workmen who chipped off the decaying stone on the old Wendel mansion at Thirty-ninth street and covered the scars with cement.

The house was built in 1856 and so long has it stood there, in its brownstone isolation among the modern bazars of fashion, that the story of its occupants is almost legendary.

Behind the high, spiked wall is a yard valued at $2,000,000, on a basis of more than $225 a square foot. There Miss Ella Wendel airs her poodle. She refuses to sell the site, or even lease it, although she has been offered $300,000 a year.

Seldom is she seen to emerge either from the mansion or her summer estate at Irvington-on-the-Hudson, but when she does, people see a little old woman dressed in the fashion of her youth—sailor hat, full skirt and a cape.

Only she and her 86-year-old sister, Mrs. Rebecca Wendel Swope, who is traveling this summer, remain of six sisters and a brother who inherited the Wendel millions. Their fortune was founded on the fur trade of their grandfather, John G. Wendel, who married a sister of the first Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

The brother never married and never favored the marriage of his sisters. He was opposed to any change and so, when he died in 1915, the family habits in the old-fashioned house remained as they had been 50 years before. Nor has anything been altered since.

Today's Anniversary
SACK OF LOUVAIN
On Aug. 19, 1924, the German army entered Louvain, Belgium and began their campaign of pillaging and sacking the city which culminated in the burning of the university and its famous library.

The Belgian troops did not attempt to hold the town, and the invaders prepared for the German's arrival. They had called in all arms and deposited them in the Hotel-de-Ville. German troops were billeted on the inhabitants, who were required to be within doors between 8 p. m. and 7 a. m. One night a shot rang out followed rapidly by two more and then by a terrible fusillade.

The windows of the houses splintered with a hail of bullets. The university and its library was set afire with faggots and chemicals.

The German soldiers smashed in the doors of the houses, dragging inmates from their hiding places, crying, "There has been firing. Civilians have fled." Hand grenades were hurled into the rooms. Several inmates were called out and instantly shot.

On Aug. 27, the soldiers announced Louvain was to be burned and everyone must leave. Then started a flood of fugitives out of the city, and the actual sack began. Houses were stripped and the entire city was burned.

SWIMMER'S SINUSITIS

Nearly all swimming pools are now constantly chlorinated, or subjected to ultraviolet ray treatment or filtration and frequent change of water in the endeavor to minimize the spread of infections among those who swim in the pool. In some establishments there is a rule that persons who wish to use the pool must be free from infection and must take a bath before entering the pool. The first part of the rule is seldom enforced, since upper respiratory infections are not obvious to the attendants, as a rule; the second part of the rule is of doubtful efficacy anyway.

A member of the Olympic swimming team says that every member of the team had discharging ear when returning from Paris. This was probably the consequence of nose-throat infection in the pool. Middle ear infection, "gathering" or abscess in the ear inside the ear drum, or running ear, is usually a consequence of nose-throat infection which reaches the middle ear cavity through the Eustachian tube from the nose (nose-throat) or the place where the nasal passage and the throat passage joins.

The severity of these swimming pool infections seem to vary with the prevailing epidemics of cri in the community. If your swimming partner purports to have a cold, my darling daughter, it is really safer to hang your clothes on a harpin and keep out of the water.

A Nashville eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, Dr. Frederick E. Hasty, finds that the water in the swimming pool during the swimming period represents the washings of nose and mouth of all the swimmers.

Dr. Hasty proved this by throwing sterile powdered charcoal into a pool before a class of boys took their usual swim. Many of the boys blew water from their mouths but none expectorated as they interpreted the term. They used a drain gutter if they wished to expectorate. Following the swimming period an examination of the nasal chambers was made and particles of charcoal were found in every part of the lining mucous membrane, with deposits of charcoal around the delicate middle turbinate body, in every boy. The mucous membrane appeared swollen, pale, and showed little evidence of the normal covering of mucus.

That last feature strikes me as the nub of the matter. If the normal mucus secretion in the vulnerable part of the nose-throat chamber is washed away any pathogenic or harmful germs that may enter in the water would have a fair chance to gain a foothold; if the normal mucus secretion were there these germs would be entrapped in it almost like flies in the coating of fly paper and either destroyed by the natural germicidal power or normal mucous discharge from nose and throat or swallowed in the secretion.

Dr. Hasty observes that the shrinkage and bleaching of the mucous membrane enlarges the natural openings into the accessory sinuses so that some of the polluted water may get into the sinuses. That, too, seems quite probable.

The prevention of swimming pool sinus infections, or similar infections at beach, river or lake bathing resorts, for that matter, narrows itself down to one of these alternatives, in my judgment:

1. Keep out of the water; or
2. Keep the water out of your nose.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
The Lidless Life
I believe you are right about going haffes. Years ago I lived in a town where, every morning, an old man passed on his way to market. He was always fatless, and he had a heavy mop of hair, and not a gray hair in his head. He was around 75 years of age (Mrs. W. P. E.)

Answer—Fine, but on the other ## hand I sometimes suspect the older

boys who happen to have nice hair take to this lidless fashion more readily than some of us younger boys who haven't anything to flaunt. Seriously, though, I believe we should all have better hair and keep it longer if head coverings were never worn except when really necessary for protection against excessive sunlight or extreme cold.

Shredded Wheat

Is shredded wheat good for diabetics, persons, and why? (A. D. W.)
Answer—No. A diabetic patient should take only as much shredded wheat as his physician may prescribe, according to the patient's tolerance. In telling you the item is not good for a diabetic person I do not imply that it is bad for him. It is no worse than any other carbohydrate food for a diabetic person.

Canned Nutriments

Kindly inform me whether there is any nutrient value in canned foods. (T. B.)

Answer—Most canned foods contain all the nutrient value of the fresh article. The canning and preservation of a food usually lessens the vitamin content of the food, but that need not interfere with the use of canned foods in the domestic economy, for natural taste or craving for fresh fruits, green relishes, etc., will generally supply adequate vitamins. It is only in infancy that the vitamin deficiency of canned food is important, and that is readily corrected by feeding the infant daily some fresh fruit juice or vegetable juice, or fruit or vegetable pulp for older infants.

Pneumonia Serum

Is there a serum for pneumonia? Can it be used at any stage of the illness? Does it affect the heart? (E. M. O.)

Answer—Yes, there is a serum, but it is effective only against pneumonia of Type I. The type is determined by culture. The serum can be given at any stage of the illness. It is absolutely safe, whether it proves helpful or not. (Copyright, John F. Dille Co.)

FLASHES FROM HOLLYWOOD

BY ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—Because a famous star remembered a young leading man who played with her years before, and that young man, now famous in his own right, remembered his little leading lady of a recent show, all three today are working together at a Hollywood studio.

When Marilyn Miller was asked to select a leading man for the talkie "Sally," without hesitation she named Alexander Gray, who had been singing for Ziegfeld in New York, but had never spoken a line on the stage before, had stepped into "Sally," unprepared, but willingly, when Miss Miller's leading man left the show in Philadelphia.

So the studio wired Alexander Gray, and had him sign a contract. They wanted a screen-talking test, however, to be made in Philadelphia, where he was starring in "The Desert Song." Gray objected to the ordinary test in which the talkie aspirant simply stands before a camera and sings something.

He suggested that he do a scene from "The Desert Song." The film managers acquiesced. So he called on the Margot of the operetta to help him in the scene, and that is why Bernice Claire, young, ambitious and pretty, also is in Hollywood. The executives saw and heard the test and signed the girl as well as Gray.

NORMALEY AMONG WRITERS

There is a sentence in "Midchannel," the second installment of the autobiography of Ludwig Lewisohn, recently published and later suppressed, that deserves the attention especially of that rather noisy class of writers who feel that literary greatness and unconventionality are synonymous. The class is not numerous but the public is much more conscious of it than it is of those writers who live normal lives. At the very least such writers think it necessary to live with some one else's wife and as for finding comfort and joy in the ordinary pleasures of ordinary people, they put that down with scorn as bourgeois.

Has something odd about him, the really exceptional, the truly great whom I have known, men like Albert Einstein or Thomas Mann, have not avoided but colsey embraced the common, universal elements that make a normal human life. They are husbands and fathers; they guard hearth and home; they are politically and specially minded and are profoundly concerned over the fate both of their peoples and of mankind.

I have not had the opportunity Lewisohn has had to observe the truly great but in a limited way my experience has been exactly the same. When a man or a woman has genuine distinction of mind—something that is not put on like a cloak but that is interwoven in the fibre so that it is as impossible for him or her to be unattentive as it is to cease to be man or woman, when anyone has that sort of distinction, I have usually found that he is not odd in any of the various ways that those have whose distinction is artificial.

Sometimes they have odd twists but almost invariably such peculiarities flow naturally from what they are. The writer or artist of genuine distinction does not strive to be odd. If he has something odd about him he is likely to be unconscious of it or because he cannot bother to pay attention to things that others regard as correct.

The false alarm, on the other hand, makes it something of a business to appear odd. He has found that it is a way of attracting attention. A large part of the public has the impression that writers and artists are different, that they are not bound by the average laws of average behavior. This section of the public has reached the conclusion that a man cannot be a genuine artist unless he defies all conventions and shows his contempt for bourgeois conduct.

That being the case, it is only natural that many who crave attention and the reputation of being artists should give their attention to showing by their manner of dress, their domestic relations and in other ways that they are "emancipated" and are not to be judged by ordinary standards. They know in their hearts that they cannot win by the force of their artists powers and so they strive for the appearance of a greatness that they do not possess. And they often succeed admirably for the time being. The passage of time finds them out but when they happens they are probably dead and have had their little triumph.

There are exceptions but this is, I believe, not an unfair description of the contract between the genuine artist and fine imitation. It is reassuring to have a man like Ludwig Lewisohn pass a similar judgment. Some drunkards have been artists but it isn't at all necessary to be a drunkard or to be a cad or a moral or selfish. When such characteristics exist they are merely accidental, not vital. Ludwig Lewisohn's sentences prick a balloon that should be pricked.

LEGION MEN KEEP GENERAL BUSY AT NATIONAL CAPITAL

"Trouble Shooter" Has Plenty of Work Listening to Complaints of Buddies

Washington, D. C. — The Yankee doughboy's old war song, "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag and Smile, Smile, Smile," has been changed to "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag and Take 'em to General Hines."

For whenever troubles overtake his American war buddies, they find Brigadier-General Frank T. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, is one man in this stern Washington officialdom who is willing to lend an understanding ear to their woes.

This middle-aged officer, who rose from the ranks as a lowly sergeant to one of the highest posts in the army, is widely known for his efforts to "humanize" the Veterans' bureau.

FAVORS VETERANS
Whether it is a needy veteran seeking compensation or a sick one in need of hospitalization, General Hines has adopted a policy of giving them the "benefit of the doubt" as far as possible under existing legislation.

How well General Hines has succeeded in the difficult task of satisfying the requests of thousands of veterans is indicated by his repeated endorsement at national conventions of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

In an address before the veterans in St. Paul Aug. 25-31, he will discuss problems confronting the bureau today in its administration of relief and the recommendations of fered by the director towards improving conditions among veterans in need of government assistance.

Back in 1898, Hines was given his first officers' stripes — those of a sergeant — in the Utah field artillery, in 1901 and the outbreak of the World War found him a captain.

DIRECTED EMBARKATION
In 1917 he was made a colonel and as chief of the embarkation service he directed the development of the organization that carried more than 2,000,000 men safely to Europe in 18 months and then brought them home in eight months. In April, 1918, he was made a brigadier general in the national army.

When scandal and charges of fraud swept high executives from control of the United States Veterans' Bureau, back in 1922, President Harding turned to Hines when he sought a new director. Hines had resigned from the army in 1926 when he joined the shipping interests in New York and lent his energies to development of the American Merchant Marine.

Hines assumed directorship of the Veterans' bureau March 1, 1923, being the fifth to serve in that capacity. At that time the bureau's main functions were the payment of compensations, the handling of war risk insurance, vocational training and hospitalization of disabled veterans.

BUREAU ENLARGED
Since that time the bureau's labors have been increased by the adjusted compensation act, the emergency officers' retirement act and a vast increase in hospitalization problems with the constantly growing number of disabled war veterans, a condition that will not reach its peak until 1947.

Under General Hines, 54 regional veterans' bureau offices have been established, with full power to administer all phases of immediate veterans' relief. Compensation schedules have been revised with necessary increases and veteran bureau care has also been extended to all veterans of all wars.

Evidence of the confidence held in General Hines by the veteran world at large and the nation in general was noted in his reappointment by President Coolidge and his recent subsequent reappointment by President Hoover.

GRID STAR TO STUDY AUSTRALIAN BUSHMEN

Melbourne, Australia — (AP) — Dr. Paul Wittington, one of the famous Harvard football players of pre-war days, is on an expedition to learn whether the Australian bushman is a survivor of the stone age.

Wittington's present venture is under S. D. Porteus, professor of racial psychology at the University of Hawaii.

"It is sheer foolishness," Dr. Porteus says, "to compare the mental life of our own race with the Australian aborigine. His evolution has been along lines widely divergent from ours."

"Directly an aborigine gave up his own ways he died. For that reason the problem of the aborigine is a vanishing one. Scientists therefore are anxious to prove the problem, a the Australian aborigine was a member of the only race living in the stone age that still exists."

EMPLOY EXPERTS TO PROTECT MORTGAGES

Managers To Decide On Whose Farm Mortgages Are To Be Held

AMES, Iowa — (AP) — Prof. William C. Murray of the department of agricultural economics, Iowa State college, has a plan whereby loan companies may protect their mortgages on farms and farmers may have trained aid in paying off such debts.

It is simply a matter of the loan company hiring a farm management expert to advise the farmer on whose property a mortgage is held.

The management expert, Professor Murray says, might have the same relationship to the farmer that a cow tester has to members of his association. He would analyze the business of the farm and suggest methods to increase his efficiency and profits.

Subjects which he might scrutinize, Murray suggests, include the most profitable way to build up the soil, proper crop rotation, successful methods for handling hogs, correct balance between labor and machinery, buying and selling, and keeping and analyzing records.

Professor Murray points out that farm loan companies sometimes lose by foreclosure despite a careful appraisal when the loan was made. The farmer may have been a poor manager and allowed the farm to deteriorate.

Professional farm management service, performed by independence agencies, is growing rapidly. Several are operating in Illinois and some loan companies already offer the service.

THE ball that Clowdy clung to tight seemed like "would sail right out of sight. The horse had kicked it very hard and through the air it went. A little voice broke through the air as Clowdy shouted, "I declare! Poor Clowdy's surely funny if he calls that pleasure bent. I hope it all turns out all right, and that he doesn't sail from sight. Perhaps the ball is full of gas which keeps it sailing fast. A trip upon a ball like that is something that sounds rather flat. I'm glad it's Clowdy 'stead of me. Oh, how long will this last?"

Just as the ball's speed seemed 'bout spent, it reached a loophole in the tent. Right through it whizzed the rubber ball and frightened Clowdy, too. "Oh, goodness me, he's disappeared," cried Copsy. That's what I feared. I wish that I could save him, but I don't know what to do. "Let's run outside and look about," another cried. "I have no doubt that pretty soon the ball will come a bounding to the ground. And then, if Clowdy hangs on tight, the whole thing may turn out all right. At least, if we all are alert, our wee friend may be saved." So, just as fast as they could run, they scampered outside, one by one. At first they didn't see a thing and everyone was scared. Then Copsy shouted. "Hip, hurra! Hey, Tinymites, look up that way. I see our good friend, Clowdy. Gee, how lucky he has fared."

The whole bunch looked and what they saw at first filled everyone with awe. Then Copsy shouted loudly. "Clowdy's landed with a plunk, but he's safe as he can be. The elephant that we can see has saved his life. He's caught the ball and Clowdy in his trunk."

(A wind storm strikes the circus in the next story.)

DECIDE NAVAL NURSE COMMITTED SUICIDE

Manila—(AP)—While admitting peculiar circumstances surround the case, the constabulary officially announced today that the death of Esther Louise Klein, 36-year-old navy nurse, was a suicide, not a murder. Miss Klein's body was found in a roadhouse here Aug. 6. The statement last Friday by Captain Rafael Jalandoni of the constabulary, that the death was not a suicide, was explained today as his own belief that he had changed his mind after an autopsy had been performed. Further investigation, he said, had not brought to light any new clues. As far as the constabulary is concerned the case is officially closed, except for an investigation of the suicide motive, which has not yet been discovered. Miss Klein's nearest relatives live at Cleveland.

Mrs. Hoover Is Hu Tai Tai When She Lives In China

BY JAMES P. HOWE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
Peking—(AP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover, who came out of China as a bride, sought a teacher of the Chinese language even before she began looking for a house. She was determined to take up the study of Chinese at the earliest opportunity. Almost the first words of the young lady after landing on Chinese soil were "Where can I find a teacher of Chinese?" But a home for the new Mrs. Hoover was the all-important thing. The young mining engineer husband soon found a dwelling to his and Mrs. Hoover's liking. They moved into the house one day and Mrs. Hoover began her Chinese lessons the next. Her first and only teacher, Chuan Tuen-tung, 76, is living today in Peking. "Mrs. Hoover," he says, "was the best pupil I ever had." Mr. Hoover, Mr. Chuan recalls never seemed to be greatly interested in learning Chinese, but Mrs. Hoover made up for him in the energy displayed in her determination to learn the language, or conversational dialect, in the shortest possible time. "It was the greatest news to me, to be sure," said Mr. Chuan, "the day the report came that Mr. Hoover had been elected President, and I recalled with pride that my former pupil was to be the first lady of the land." The interview took place in Mr. Chuan's Peking home, his son Peter, a Yale graduate, acting as interpreter. "Mrs. Hoover took Chinese lessons for one hour a day for eight months," Mr. Chuan went on, clearing his eyes now and then as his thoughts went back to 1899 and the days when the Hoovers were "Griffins," the English term applied to all new-comers in China. The old gentleman would talk to his son five or six minutes at a stretch about "Hi Tai Tai," — the "Hi" being Chinese for Hoover and "Tai Tai" the equivalent of "mistress." "How well I remember Hu Tai Tai," he said with a sentimental nod of the head, "and how determinedly she studied! So many foreigners have great difficulty in getting started, but not so with Hu Tai Tai. "Why, I recollect vividly the last time she was in our Tientsin home. My wife was there, and the eight children. Hu Tai Tai knew all of them by name, and on this particular day, she stayed for a meal with us. "And I am sure we had chu po-po in her honor."

ROSY SUNSET EFFECT CREATED IN DAYLIGHT

Yonkers, N. Y. —(AP)— Ordinary daylight appears pink when viewed from the interior of one of the special plant growing rooms of the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research.

This room is covered with a blue glass which removes the red and yellow from the light passing through it. A room in full daylight adjoins the blue chamber. Merely stepping into the blue room and looking back, causes everything in the full light

Country Traditions Fall With New York Bank Head

New York—(AP)— When Henry C. Von Elm was 15 years old he persuaded the Manufacturers' National bank to give him a job as a clerk. He had no banking experience and was not even sure that he wanted to be a banker. Least of all did he foresee that he would remain with the same bank 26 years and end up by being told that he was president of an institution with $500,000,000 in resources. In the first place, the country boy tradition is strong in New York.

NEGRO EMBASSY MAN TELLS OF DIPLOMATS

Charles Browne Spent 41 Years Among Foreign Ambassadors

Washington—(AP)— Charles Browne, negro servant of 12 British ambassadors and ministers, has written his memoirs under the title "Forty-One Years in a School of Diplomacy."

As a child Browne played hide and seek in the foundations of the embassy, then under construction. Lord Bessville West hired him to run errands. In 1888 and since then he has been employed there continuously. Meanwhile he went to school and became a student of international affairs. He can recount the date of every social event of importance in the embassy or the status and intent of most pieces of legislation pending in congress.

Lean and short of stature, his hair now grey, he goes from office to office in government buildings gathering documents. Officials high and low know Charles Browne. Sometimes they greet him affectionately; "Mr. Embassy," Browne then grins with pleasure.

Browne went to high school and was graduated from Howard university. Of his volume, he says: "It is no literary effort but the plain facts of my experience. I've written down in my diary things that happened and things that were said long ago, and now I am adding observations which resulted from them."

Browne was born in a house less than a block from the embassy. His father was the first negro appointed to a clerkship in the treasury.

room to appear pink, especially all white surfaces.

The illusion is due to the large volume of red rays in full light, in visible as red to a person in daylight, but noticeable to anyone "outside" if daylight, which in effect is the position produced by the blue chamber.

RIDES, NOT WALKS
"I never go out with a boy who whistles after me."
"Nor I, dear, but I don't mind one who tootles his motor horn."—Passing Show.

Many favorite anecdotes have to do with how hard it is to find a native New Yorker among the business leaders of the metropolis.

When Mr. Von Elm came to New York to make his fortune he had only to cross the East River. He was born in Brooklyn 41 years ago and began his banking career in 1903.

The Manufacturers' Trust company merged with the Manufacturers' National bank in 1914, one of the first large scale bank consolidation at a time when such things were not daily occurrences.

Two years later he was made assistant secretary of the new institution, now called the Manufacturers' Trust company.

About that time the bank adopted another pioneering policy, branch or chain banking, and began to push vigorously into Manhattan banking territory.

In 1919 Von Elm became a vice-president, and in 1923, when the Columbia bank was absorbed, he became manager of the Fifth-avenue unit. He was named chairman of the credit conference committee and in 1927 he was brought back to the main office as chairman of the executive committee where he worked in cooperation with the former president, Nathan Jones.

The latter became chairman of the board when Von Elm was elected president.

NEW LOCOMOTIVE HAS THREE POWER SOURCES

Chicago—(AP)— Terminal railroad, and switching may be revolutionized by a new type 90-ton locomotive being tested here by the Illinois Central railroad.

The new locomotive, smokeless and noiseless, can be operated from any one of three sources of power — overhead wires, gas engines and storage batteries.

Operating under trolley wires the locomotives can haul from 40 to 50 cars, tests have shown. Using power generated by its own storage batteries it can be used for switching cars on tracks that do not carry electric current.

The locomotives is mounted on two trucks, each provided with two electric motors. Two engines use gasoline at the start, but when warmed up burn oil similar to that used in heating residences. The engines can be used for traction purposes or to charge the batteries. The batteries also can be charged from a generator which operates when the locomotive works under a trolley.

Changing from one source of power to another is merely a matter of pushing a button.

HOLDS CYMBAL SECRET
Constantinople — There are cymbals and cymbals, but all of those nose makers owe their origin to a family in Psamatia, a suburb of this city, which has guarded its secret for several hundred years. The name of the family, Zildjian, means "cymbal makers." The secret method of making the instruments is now held by the head of the clan, a woman more than 80 years old.

NEENAH PLAYGROUND SUMMER PROGRAM IS ENDED WITH SUCCESS

Incomplete Reports Indicate Attendance Was Tripled Over Last Season

Neenah—The closing Saturday of the annual playground program of activities which have been in progress under direction of Coach George Christoph for the last three months, discloses the fact that this year has eclipsed all previous years in enthusiasm and attendance.

While the actual reports of Mr. Christoph and his three assistants Leonard Neubauer, Frederick Olson and Byron Jensen, have not been compiled, it is learned that there were more people in daily attendance, and participating in the sports offered by the Red Cross and city jointly, than ever before, the figures more than tripling those of last year.

Softball with its three leagues, the National, American and Young Men's was the chief drawing card, the several teams playing regularly Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday nights. These games drew out on some occasions more than 3,000 spectators and this week, during the finals, the crowds will be even larger than that.

Tennis brought out a lot of new players with the boys, girls, playgrounds and city championship tournaments for which the winners were given medals.

Horseback pitching has developed from a handful of pitchers a year ago to more than 200 good players of the game. There were also tournaments in this sport which created a great deal of interest.

Golf and archery were introduced this year, and a large number of young people took part.

The bathhouse broke all records both in attendance and in the number of people who have taken advantage of the free swimming and diving lessons.

Gordon Erdman is the champion athlete of the season's playground activities. This honor was awarded for entering and remaining in all playground sports for which he received 140 points and a medal. Tod Barnes was a close second with 135 points. Others who took part in most of the activities were Norman Jensen, 101; Stanford Hass, 97; Raymond Napuk, 96; Ervike Krause, 95; Donald From, 94; Ronald Johnson, 87; Charles Zemlock, 85; Harvey Woeckel, 83; R. Larson, 78; Frank Witt, 73; Gordon Sawyer, 70; Fredrick Asmus, 67; J. Danielson, 67; Paul Strang, 66; W. Jensen, 63; G. Menning, 62; Gilbert Sawyer, 59; D. Neahling, 58; Paul Stacker, 57.

The Fourth ward Midgets are the playground baseball champs, having defeated the Columbian park team two out of three games played in the finals. Columbian park Cadets are the champs in that set, having won two out of three games played with the Fourth ward Cadets. The Doty Island teams secured third places in both sets.

All that is left of the season's program is the sail boat judging and sailing, which will be held at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon on the river bank at the rear of the S. F. Shattuck residence; the finals in the boys' ball casting tournament, which will be held at 9:30 Wednesday morning at Columbian park, and the annual hike and picnic. For this event the boys will meet at 8 o'clock Thursday morning at Columbian park and the girl delegation at the same hour at the Young Women's Christian association club rooms.

CHAMPIONSHIP TEAMS TO MEET THIS WEEK

Neenah—The first of the championship series of games to be played by the Drabell Specials and Burts candies teams of the Young Men's softball league, will be played at 6 o'clock Monday evening at Columbian park diamond. The second game in the championship series will be played Thursday evening and should the third be necessary will be played Friday evening at Columbian park. These two teams contain the best ball players in the younger set and some exciting games are expected.

KOHLER FLIES TO MENASHA TO TALK AT BRIDGE OPENING

Formal Ceremony Of Dedication Will Take Place Saturday, Aug. 31

Menasha—The dedication of the new Taycoast bridge will be held Sunday afternoon and evening Aug. 31 and Gov. Walter J. Kohler will be the principal speaker. This information came from the state highway commission through W. H. Guenther, state bridge engineer in charge of construction work on the new structure whom he called up by telephone.

The governor will arrive about noon by airplane on his way to Menominee, Mich., and will remain here until 2:00 o'clock. He is due to deliver an address at Menominee at 3 o'clock. Not only will the governor be here but also State Highway Engineer W. C. Buetow and State Bridge Engineer C. H. Kirch and the state highway commissioners, Jerry Donahue, K. G. Kurtenacker and Fred J. Sequin.

The local committee in charge of the dedication is now in position to complete their program. The state highway commission has made only one restriction in connection with the celebration and that is that no trucks will be permitted over the bridge at the time of the dedication in order to give the concrete approaches time to season. The patrolling will be in charge of the motorcycle squad now on duty at the bridge.

Engineer Guenther is well satisfied with the progress made over the weekend and expects to have the bridge, with the exception of a few unimportant details, completed by the time set for the dedication. The only work that is at all backward is the connection with towers the contract for which was awarded the Selmer company of Green Bay, but this will be speeded up during the coming two weeks.

Besides the state officials other guests of honor will include the county highway commission, Congressman Florian Lampert of Oshkosh, State Senator White of Winnebago and the mayors of neighboring cities.

REFORMERS START STRONG CAMPAIGN AGAINST CIGARETS

Use Quotation from President Hoover in Their Literature

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington (AP)—"Cigarettes are a source of crime," says President Hoover.

He is thus quoted in a propaganda sheet being broadcast by the Anti-Cigarette Alliance, which seeks to make this a sweeter and better world by abolishing cigarettes. The piece of propaganda is entitled "What Great Americans Say About Cigarettes." The president is quoted as follows:

"There is no agency in the world today that is so seriously affecting the health, efficiency, education and character of boys and girls as the cigarette habit, yet very little attention is paid to it. Nearly every delinquent boy is a cigarette smoker which certainly has much to do with it."

OUT OF A LETTER

The Anti-Cigarette Alliance, on inquiry, says the extract was taken from a letter to President Coolidge from Mr. Hoover written while the latter was Secretary of Commerce.

The other great Americans quoted against the cigarette are Senator Reed Smoot of Utah and President President Daniel B. Poling of the Christian endeavor.

President Hoover smokes cigars and sometimes a pipe. The Alliance is really opposed to all types of smoking, but it concentrates its attack on cigarettes.

The organization is pushing out this Hoover state at a time when professional reformers are showing a greater tendency than ever to branch out from prohibition, gambling and vice and take in tobacco.

Mr. Hoover, although he appeared to be mainly concerned with the effects of cigarettes on boys and girls, even going so far as to suggest that they cause adolescents to become criminals, has said nothing against use of cigarettes by adults. In fact, it is quite a common thing to smoke cigarettes in the presidential presence.

Mr. Coolidge also preferred cigars, but Harding was a cigar smoker. A few weeks ago the Rev. Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, publicly announced that the cigarette makers were following in the dangerous footsteps of the old-time liquor interests and warned by implication of some future prohibition act against cigarettes.

"Equally ominous from the standpoint of the cigarette smoker were the words of the Christian Register, an organ of the Unitarians—often regarded as a liberal denomination—in its editorial.

"For several years we have said nothing about tobacco," says the editor. "Cigarette consumption is rampant and colossal, and only an astronomer can give the figures. But the time is near at hand when the women crusaders are going to assail the habit among women, and the result will not be in doubt. Fantastic it seems, but fact it will become. That tobacco will soon be fighting for its right to be a solace to mankind, as the liquor people did the other day, is not a possibility. Their sense of humor prohibition came to an end. Medical experiments in all kinds of ways have demonstrated in the extra-ordinary clinical articles that were published in the Register 10 years ago.

"Whoever uses tobacco habitually in any form, but especially in smoking, the clinic said, is not the same person, nor as good a person, as he would be in body, mind and spirit, if he left it alone. We are telling the world, and the world is going to shout it in the next decade."

Obviously such propaganda is directed against adult cigarette and smoking, though adolescent smoking and advertising appeals to women have offered an especially convenient target for the recent welter of it.

HET REBUTAL THE ADS

No bills to abolish cigarettes have been introduced yet in congress, but Senator Smoot has a resolution designed to regulate cigarette advertising on magazine grounds on which alcohol has been attacked. He points out the great "waste of money," the "decreases of efficiency," the loss to employers of cigarette-smoking workmen, the "link" between excessive cigarette smoking and the drink and drug habits and so on. He is especially sour about the appeals to potential women smokers, though editorial writers have suggested that he is speaking for the sugar interests which are powerful in his home state.

The Anti-Saloon League is taking no part in the early skirmishes against cigarettes. Some of the League officials, in fact, are inveterate smokers.

Council To Meet

Menasha—The common council will hold its mid-month meeting Tuesday evening at the city hall. The session will be occupied with routine business.

WHAT'S A LITTLE THING LIKE SLEEP?

By NEA Service

London (AP)—At 51, when most men are fast asleep, E. B. Campbell-Smith, electrical agent, works 21 hours a day and sleeps three.

He never feels tired, and any hour from 3 a. m. to 12 midnight might find this machine man working at his desk or engrossed in a novel. It is said that he has gone 60 and 72 hours, without sleep.

"Most people sleep too much," he says. "The only time I had eight hours sleep I felt ill for days." The great thing is the quality of the sleep rather than the quantity. In a few hours I sleep every bone, muscle and nerve is at rest, and the three hours of this is far more beneficial than eight or nine of so-called sleep. Few people have learned the art of real sleep."

Will Have Postoffice in Air

This is how Uncle Sam's flying postoffices will look when clerks are carried on planes to sort airmail while the plane is en route. The Boeing Air Transport, operators of the San Francisco-Chicago route, is building a fleet of 18-passenger planes which can be converted into mail planes like this within 24 hours. The mail cabin is 19 1/2 feet long, five and one half feet wide, and allows a clerk to stand upright while working. There is room for 230,000 letters.

Drag Texas River For Body Of Song Writer

New York (AP)—Police were dragging the East river today in their search for a young Texas matron who disappeared shortly after she had appealed to Vice President Curtis to help her enter a career as a song writer.

A woman believed to be Mrs. W. C. Edwards of Eastmont, Texas, on Saturday night walked up to a little girl near the Brooklyn bridge, handed her a note and asked the way to the river.

The note read: "I'm leaving on a long journey; will you please send this stuff to my mother?"

In a valise which police located in the Pennsylvania station through a baggage check that was inclosed with the note, were found two letters.

BADGER LAWMAKERS EAGER TO END WORK AND GET BACK HOME

Number Of Important Problems May Be Left Unsolved By Legislature

Madison—A number of state problems may be left unsolved, it is believed, with the legislature anxious to finish its work this week. The university appropriation bill has been passed, but an attempt is planned in the assembly to reconsider this measure despite the anxiety of members to go home.

The plan to boost the gasoline tax and to revise the income tax law may meet untimely death this week unless an agreement comes promptly. The legislature is at last in the mood to either pass or kill bills, wasting little time in debate or other delays.

WANTED FOR HIGHWAY BOARD

Gov. Kohler wants an additional cent of gasoline tax, making a 3 cent levy, to provide a bigger through road fund, but in the rush of closing hours he may be left with the state's first full time highway commission appointed, but no funds with which to speed up road building. The assembly insists on using an increased gasoline tax for relief of local burdens. Final action on the highway bills await a compromise, and a middle of the road program will be offered this week. The session will probably end with no change in the income tax this week, in spite of the fact that all factions were pledged in the last campaign to grant more concessions to the small income people.

INCOME TAX UNSETTLED

Although the governor recommended that the three year average clause of the income tax law be wiped out, his followers in the senate have passed the Daggett bill calling for an increase of only $2 for married persons, and $2 for each child. The rest of the Zimmerman law would remain intact under this bill. The house wants to do away with the three year average and the Daggett bill promises to carry a number of amendments before it again reaches the senate.

Legislators are anxious to quit before the state fair next week. Another urge for quitting this week is the fact that the new salary scale bill provides that the members get $100 a month, starting on Sept. 1, if final adjournment comes in August. Otherwise the new pay does not start until Oct. 1.

HOLLOW WIRES SOLVE POWER LINE LEAKAGE

Washington (AP)—Leakage, long the bugbear of long distance transmission of high voltage electricity, is being stopped with the use of hollow wires, according to scientists of the bureau of standards.

Tubes, instead of solid metal, have been found to decrease the losses of energy, which heretofore presented the greatest problem in sending power under great pressure.

Electricity, it is explained by Dr. M. G. Lloyd of the bureau, finds its most efficient medium for travel in a broad, flat strip of metal. The more the surface is reduced, the greater the loss. A line reduced to a needle point would cause heavy leakage.

Heavy wire supplanted slender wire and it was found that high voltage electricity could be transmitted successfully with decreased loss. The use of the heavier medium was not practical, however, because of the increased cost of more metal and the problem of maintaining stronger poles to uphold the greater weight.

Hollow wires then were struck upon as eliminating both the weight and cost of solid metal. In practice, strands of solid wire are wound around a central metal core to weave a tube. High voltage was found to be transmitted without loss.

Slender, solid wires continue to be sufficient, however, for the transmission of local, low-power energy. It is only where high voltages become necessary in furnishing the pressure to send energy for great distances that leakage has been a problem.

NEARLY 10,000 MEN NOW OUT TO BATTLE MANY FOREST FIRES

Rains In Puget Sound Zone Quenches Large Area-Flames Gain In Others

Seattle (AP)—Stubborn forest fires in eastern Washington, Idaho and Montana, aided by high winds and dry weather, continued to claim the services of almost 10,000 men today, although fires in the Puget Sound region were being quenched by rain falling.

The Chelan national forest in central Washington, scene of desperate fire fighting during the past week, blazed with renewed energy despite a light rain which was reported to have visited it. The Camas Creek, Timber Wolf creek, and Rimmel lake fires increased in intensity and 100 more men were sent to the Chelan area from Portland.

A 35-mile an hour gale was blowing a huge fire north over Graves mountain toward Dead Man creek basin near Kettle Falls. Northeastern Washington, The Shermans creek fire has burned over between 45,000 and 50,000 acres.

The fire at Half Moon near White Fish, Mont., was still out of control with 200 men trying to surround it. It covered 400 acres.

An additional crew of 50 men was reported to have arrived to battle the Deer mountain blaze in the Colville National Forest. Fires near Lake Pend Oreille in Idaho brought 75 more fighters in from the states.

Breaking out in slashings of the Forest Falls Lumber company at Index, 65 miles northeast of here, a fire had spread over more than 300 acres. Aided by rain, 75 men were fighting to control it. In Eastern Oregon the Dales road fire was considered sufficiently controlled to take 60 men off the force fighting it.

The last two forest fires in Siskiyou county, California were conquered after one burned over 400 acres in the Shasta National forest and the other along a five mile road a mile south of Yreka.

Reports from Idaho said that lightning over the state's central district had fired new sectors and high winds continued to spread other fires. Four new blazes were discovered in the Selway district and three in the Clearwater country.

Eight hundred acres in Selway had been destroyed by the Maggie Butte fire, including two pole loading camps. All buildings were burned, together with several families escaped. "Kamiah," Idaho, reported three men unaccounted for.

An appeal was sent to forestry officials in Moscow for help to fight a 3,600-acre blaze that was being fanned by high winds in the cottonwood country. Canada's fires along the coast were brought under control last yesterday with the aid of light rains, but inland flames were serious with the weather continuing dry.

Mountainous endangers new stands of timber and road building, logging equipment and timbers of the White Pine Lumber company of Nakusp were reported destroyed.

CORN STALKS ADVISED AS GOOD SNOW-BREAK

Pierre, S. D. (AP)—Advisability of planting corn on the north and west sides of highways to prevent snowdrifts is being studied by farm organizations at the suggestion of Frank D. Kriebes, state secretary of agriculture.

It is noticeable, he says, that most of the snowdrifts in the road are found where meadows or plowed fields lie on the north and west sides. If corn were planted there and a five to 10 acre strip of stalks or high stubble left standing, winds from the north and west would pile the snow against them instead of sweeping it out into the highways.

Besides acting as a snow fence, the stalks would hold moisture where it is most needed. Land contiguous to highways drains rapidly. Kriebes says small grains as well as corn may be used if high stubble is not available.

Farmers, he says, will be repaid three-fold by increased crops as a result of retained moisture and taxpayers will be saved much expense in removing snow and maintaining highways.

MUNICIPAL UTILITY IS HELD EQUAL TO PRIVATE COMPANY

Refuse To Permit Kaukauna To Extend Lines To Van- denbrook

A municipally owned utility extending its service beyond the borders of the municipality in which it operates is subject to the same regulation, with respect to extending its service, as a privately owned utility, the Wisconsin Railroad commission stated in an order denying the petition of town of Vandenbrook residents that the City of Kaukauna be permitted to extend service to them.

The commission requires that when a public utility wishes to extend its lines into territory already occupied by another utility enjoying an indeterminate permit, the utility must first secure from the commission a writ of convenience and necessity. The commission ruled in the Vandenbrook application that inasmuch as the Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. already is operating in that town there is no necessity for the Kaukauna municipal utility to enter that field and it suggested that if Vandenbrook residents are not satisfied with the service the Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. is giving these residents can place their complaints before the commission.

BOARD'S ORDER

Here is the commission's order: Petition signed by John H. Hirsch and 18 others requests that permission be granted to the City of Kaukauna through its electrical department to construct lines and furnish electric service to the residents of the Town of Vandenbrook, Outagamie county. A hearing was held at Appleton.

The testimony shows that on December 5, 1911, the Town Board of the Town of Vandenbrook granted to the Wisconsin Traction Light, Heat and Power company, predecessor in title to the Wisconsin Michigan Power company. This permit is as follows:

"We, the undersigned, constituting the Board of Supervisors of the Town of Vandenbrook, County of Outagamie, Wisconsin, hereby consent that the Wisconsin Traction Light Heat and Power company, a Wisconsin corporation, its successors and assigns, may occupy any highway, street, alley, lane park or public ground in said town for constructing, maintaining and operating lines with all necessary wires, conduits and appurtenances for the purpose of supplying light, heat, power or signals to any building, manufactory, industry or public or private house in said town for the purpose of conveying electric current into and through the said Town of Vandenbrook for light, heat, power or signals, providing, however, that no permanent injury is done to any such highway, street, alley, lane, park or public ground.

PETITION
"Dated this 5th day of December, A. D. 1911.

As Supervisors for the Town of Vandenbrook—A. J. Vandenberg, Joe Wildenberg, H. C. Bongers."

Thereafter, the Wisconsin Michigan Power company, or its predecessors in title, furnished electrical service in the Town of Vandenbrook to the Village of Kimberly Bridge in 1913; to John Stein in 1915; N. Nooyen in 1916; to Jacob Demerath in 1917 and to Jacob Demerath at another location in 1919.

All of the above customers have been continuously served up to the present time. Service was also extended to William Verhagen in 1919, but this service was discontinued in 1922.

Thereafter, the company made various extensions of service in this town so that at the present time it has seventeen customers in the town.

The permit granted to the predecessor of the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company was duly approved by the county board of Outagamie county and the Wisconsin highway commission.

On March 27, 1919, the Town board of Vandenbrook granted a permit to the City of Kaukauna as follows:

"This permit granted this 27th day of March 1919, grants to the City of Kaukauna through its Electrical Department, hereinafter called the Power Company, permission to construct and maintain poles and wires along any public highway in the Town of Vandenbrook which the Power Company may at any time deem advisable to construct, to furnish Electrical service to owners of property in the Town of Vandenbrook, provided that the Power Company construct and maintain such lines in accordance with Chapter 318, Section 1329A of the Laws of Wisconsin governing such construction.

A. J. Vandenberg
John Van Den Heuvel
John Dietrich."

Thereafter, in December 1919, the city extended service to John Van Ryt and John Vonderen and from time to time extended its lines in the town so that at present it is serving twenty-eight customers in the Town of Vandenbrook.

HELD CONFABS

In 1926, there were conferences between the management of the City of Kaukauna's Electrical Department and representatives of the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company concerning the division of territory in various towns in the vicinity of Kaukauna where a dispute as to the right of the various utilities to serve had arisen.

The commission was consulted informally with respect to these territorial arrangements and indicated to the parties that under its interpretation of the utility law a utility holding an indeterminate permit in that town may permit another public utility to render service in a portion of that town as its agent, providing, of course, that adequate service at reasonable rates is thereby provided for the inhabitants of the town, which the utility holding the indeterminate permit is under obligation to serve.

It appears that the territorial agreements then made between the Electrical Department of the City of Kaukauna and the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company, including the Miss Chittenden is shown at right as she drove off. John Waters, center, wore the most handsomely striped pajamas during the tournament.

Town of Vandenbrook and the operations of the respective utilities in this town, were definitely established. The City of Kaukauna is not now before the commission seeking a certificate of public convenience and necessity authorizing its operation in the town of Vandenbrook, but on the hearing indicated its adherence to the agreement providing for a division of the territory.

WOULD COMPLY
However, it indicated its willingness to comply with any order of the commission requiring the extension of its lines in said town.

Some of the petitioners have discussed with the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company the question of extending its lines for their service and that company has indicated its willingness to extend service in the portions of the town reserved to it in the territorial agreement under its lawful schedules and rules. The petitioners apparently are dissatisfied with the rules and rates of the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company, as applied to their situation, as they understand them and believe that the desired service could be furnished to them by the City of Kaukauna on more favorable terms.

It is clear from the testimony and evidence that the Wisconsin-Michigan company enjoys an indeterminate permit in the Town of Vandenbrook and that the permit granted to the City of Kaukauna did not have the effect of endowing the City of Kaukauna with an indeterminate permit in said town, inasmuch as no certified of public convenience and necessity was applied for or issued by this commission.

By Section 66.06, paragraph (12) a city owning its own electrical plant is authorized to extend its plant or equipment to serve persons or places outside of its corporate limits.

RIGHT TO SERVE

Whether this statute merely empowers a municipal utility to extend lines outside of its borders subject to obtaining the right to serve in such outside community in the manner prescribed by statute for public utilities, or whether it grants a municipality the absolute right to extend its lines in an adjoining community, irrespective of the presence of another operating utility, or of action by the Town Board granting authority therefore, has not been authoritatively passed on by the courts of Wisconsin. This commission has consistently taken the position that a municipality operating a public utility which furnishes service beyond its own borders is, with respect to such service, governed by all of the provisions of the public utility law applicable to privately owned utilities and that such municipal utility may not extend its lines into a town where there is in operation a privately owned utility under an indeterminate permit without first securing from this commission a certificate of public convenience and necessity.

We conclude, therefore, that the City of Kaukauna has no rightful authority to furnish service in the town of Vandenbrook, except as the agent of the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company which holds an indeterminate permit in that town.

READY TO SERVE

Inasmuch as the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company stands ready to extend service to all of the petitioners in this proceeding in accordance with the rules and rates lawfully applicable and on file with this commission, there appears to be no ground for requiring this company to arrange for the extension of service by its agent, the City of Kaukauna to the petitioners.

If the petitioners herein are of the opinion that the schedules of the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company covering the conditions under which extension of service will be made and the rates applicable thereto are in any respect unreasonable or unlawful, it is their privilege to file a petition with the commission, in which event the matter will be heard and determined in the usual manner.

Similarly, if the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company should, upon proper application therefore, fail to extend its lines to the petitioners in accordance with its lawful rates and rules, this commission has authority upon petition of the aggrieved parties to require such an extension of service.

The commission finds that the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company holds an indeterminate permit for furnishing electric service in the Town of Vandenbrook, Outagamie county and that the City of Kaukauna does not hold an indeterminate permit in said town.

The commission further finds that the agreement dividing the territory of said town between the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company and the

U. S. GAINS MILLIONS ON WALL STREET SITE

New York — (AP) — The United States government stands to profit almost $6,000,000 through a real estate transaction involving the sale of the New York stock exchange.

The building is a four-story structure standing next to the old sub-treasury building on Wall Street. The government bought the site in 1854 and paid $330,000 for it, a price that caused some opposition on the ground that it was exorbitant.

The treasury department in Washington, when it was recently decided to move the assay office to less expensive quarters and a locality more accessible to the piers where shipments of gold are handled, called for bids on the present property. The amounts ran from $5,120,000 to $6,501,000.

In pre-revolutionary days the assay building site belonged to the Verplanck family, who used it for residential purposes. In 1822 the family sold it to banking interests. Wall street was beginning to lose its shady, neighborly atmosphere.

The city hall once stood on the site of the sub-treasury. Until a few years before the revolutionary war the place was a vacant lot. In fact its value was so little appreciated or anticipated by the city council of the year 1765 that Abraham de Peyster, the owner, was ordered to fence it as "a public nuisance."

The city of Kaukauna is not inconsistent with the public interest.

It is therefore ordered that the petition herein be and the same is hereby dismissed.

Insure Safety Of Dams With New Combination

Cambridge, Mass. — A combination of steel and concrete, the newest scientific device for insuring safety of dams, has just been finished at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

It is a flat slab weighing 15 tons, closing one side of a concrete bin 14 feet square and 14 feet deep.

Its function is to measure the side pressure of earth in the bin in quantities sufficiently large to indicate the actual pressure in full sized dams.

It is used to gauge samples of the earth that goes into the dam. For that soil, whether dry, wet or saturated with water, it gives the safety ratio to a pound.

The curtain is starting its first job by testing several carloads of earth from Little, N. H., for a dam there. Engineers have equations to compute side pressure of earthen walls, but it is said at the institute that never before have they possessed a great apparatus capable of measuring the actual pressure of soils in 150 ton lots.

A steam shovel feeds dirt to the bin, and a two-story building houses it. Push against one side of the bin lands the curtain, swinging outward slightly with pressure of soil inside.

Despite the great bulk, the balance is adjusted so delicately that the maximum side pressure will move the curtain only one-hundredth

Lefty Ritten Gives Six Hits; Fords Beat Fondy 9-2

USING four good fingers and a sore thumb that was split wide open after he went to bat in the second inning, Lefty Ritten pitched the Fords to a 9-2 victory over Fond du Lac yesterday afternoon at Grand park. The invaders got six hits, and Appleton won another ball game 9 and 2.

Lefty allowed two blows in the first inning that cost a run, gave one in the fourth and another in the sixth and two in the ninth, the latter going for nothing when Hurta failed to remember the little technicality about touching bases. A double by Senecal and a single by Long with a play at second that was expected to nip the runner at home and didn't, gave Fondy its first run. And besides the inning being noteworthy because of the initial contact it also bears mention because Ritten pitched enough balls for three fumes. Most of them went for foul balls and fans wondered how long the tactics were going to be prolonged. Fondy's second contact was a homer by Jansen in the fourth with no one on.

Appleton counted three runs in the second inning to take a lead that never was headed. Murphy singled and went to third on Tornado's single and an error by the center fielder. Nicodem then drove one down third base and Leo counted.

Two more runs were registered in the third inning, a double play killing off what looked like a couple more. Eggert started the works by driving the ball at Hansen and was safe while the Fondy pitcher was looking for the horseshoe. Leo Murphy then came to the plate and after wiggling his bat in a most threatening fashion he tapped the leather out into space and across the right field fence.

The Fords idled a bit during the fourth and fifth innings but managed to dig up three runs in the sixth. Dave Crowe was first up and he singled. Smiley Nicodem then picked up a walk and that brought Boozie Bowers to the plate. He looked at a couple and then found one to his liking which he proceeded to toss out onto the railway tracks.

Bowers also scored the final run of the afternoon for the Fords. In the ninth he was safe at first while Fondy was tossing out Nicodem on a force out at second, then stole second base and moved to third when Ritten grounded out. That brought Kotal to the plate and Bowers scored when Eddie dropped the ball into right for a single.

Wiggins May Get Life For This

Indianapolis, Ind. — (AP) — Chuck Wiggins, veteran local heavyweight boxer, and known to thousands of ring fans as the "Hoosier Playboy," because of his antics in the ring, tried out his fist prowess on a large part of the Indianapolis police force last night—and took the count. As a rule he may not be able to go through with his scheduled ten-round bout with Al Friedman, Boston heavyweight here Tuesday night. Wiggins was badly beaten before he was finally jailed. The trouble started when his machine struck that of a police car. After knocking down the officer that attempted to arrest him, Wiggins was cornered in a hotel lobby which was badly damaged in the ensuing fight. The emergency squad had to be called before he was subdued.

Wiggins was charged with drunkenness, operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, resisting an officer, assault and battery, failure to stop after an accident and vagrancy.

WALKER, LOMSKI TANGLE TONIGHT AT PHILADELPHIA

Winner Will Be Considered Best Choice For Light Heavy Crown

New York—(AP)—At the municipal stadium Philadelphia tonight Mickey Walker, king of world middleweights, tangles in a ten-round bout with Leo Lomski, the deadly body-puncher from Aberdeen, Wash. Mickey's crown will not be involved but the bout may go far toward determining the next light heavyweight champion. Tommy Loughran, matched with Jack Sharkey in the big heavyweight battle of the fall, soon is to relinquish his 170-lb. championship and Walker already has let it be known he intends to claim the crown. Lomski long has been considered a leading challenger for that title.

Chicago offers an all-star card at the Chicago stadium Friday night with four ten-rounders involving featherweights, lightweights, welterweights and middleweights. Rene Devos, Belgian, 160-pounder, meets Johnny Burns, a promising boxer from San Francisco, in what seems to be the best offering. Joey Medill, Chicago lightweight, who recently gave Stanislaus Loyza of Chile a grounding at New York will try to outpoint Mr. Sullivan, St. Paul welterweight. Eddie Shea of Boston and Eddie Shea and Earl Mastro, rival Chicago featherweights, are matched in the other two ten-rounders.

Two of the leading heavyweights in the business, W. L. Young Striling and Jimmy Maloney of Boston, are to see action in widely separated cities tonight. At Kansas City, Striling meets Joe Sekyra of Dayton and Maloney is facing Ricardo Bertazzoli, of Italy, at Braves Field, Boston. Both bouts are set for ten rounds.

Dave Shade, veteran Pacific coast middleweight, battles Young George Dixon, Portland, Ore., Negro, in a ten-rounder at Oakland on Wednesday night.

Hits and Errors

ARNIE HILLMAN was the original tough luck kid in Sunday's games. The centerfielder went to the plate five times and five times had to walk back to the bench the victim of a strike out.

Hansen turned 12 members of the Appleton club back via the strike-out route. With Hillman taking the honor with five whiffs it took only a few other clubbers to help turn in the mark. Eggert fanned twice, Tornow once, Crowe once, Bowers, once and Lefty Ritten twice.

The way Ritten went after things in the first three innings it looked as though he were headed for a new strikeout mark. He retired three men in the first inning—one in the second and one in the third. After that he let up a bit and picked up seven for the day's work.

Manager Kotal fattened his bat average by getting four blows in five trips to the plate. They all were singles. The other Appleton clouter was Leo Murphy who hit two for three. Murphy's war club has been singing a mean song of late and he should be up among 'em when the bat averages come through this week.

Three home runs were coined during the afternoon, two by Appleton and one by Fond du Lac. Leo Murphy got the first by crashing the ball in the direction of Little Chute with a man on the paths. Bowers hit one with two men on. Jensen got the Fondy marker with no one waiting.

The cloudy cold weather kept the attendance down and with a split on the gate, both clubs again went into the red ink. The only hope of the Fords now is they get a good break on the next three out-of-town crowds. Green Bay, Kaukauna and Wiscousin Rapids.

Sunday's battle ended in a rather abrupt manner. With two on in the ninth inning Senecal singled through second. Hurta scored on the play but he failed to touch third base. After Hurta was over the rubber, Kotal called for the ball and touched the base. Eicher calling the runner out.

Helen Wills To Defend National Tennis Title At Forest Hills Tourney

Betty Nuthall Expected To Give Californian Strongest Opposition

FOREST HILLS, N. Y. — (AP) — Three players who have known what it is to be queen of American courts and 61 others who would like to know, were here today for the opening of the women's national tennis championships at the West Side Tennis Club.

Helen Wills, of Berkeley, Calif., the defending champion, has won the title five times. Among the 63 players seeking to dethrone her are Mrs. Hella Malory, eight-times national champion, and Mrs. May Sutton Bundy of Santa Monica, titleholder in 1904.

Miss Wills and Mrs. Malory have had almost a struggle hold on the singles championship ever since 1915. Only once in the last 14 years has any other player won the title. Mrs. Hazel Hunt simply Molla Bjurstedt began her reign in 1915, when again in 1916-17-18-20-21-22-26. Miss Wills first won the title in 1923, repeated in 1924-25, did not defend it in 1926 and won it again in 1927 and 1928.

But Miss Wills' most serious opposition this year is expected to come not from either Mrs. Malory or Mrs. Bundy but from several younger players. Not only is the Berkeley girl threatened by American rivals but by a dozen players from other lands as well.

England has sent a delegation of six, headed by 18-year-old Betty Nuthall who gave the American champ such a terrific battle in the Wimbledon cup matches that some critics concede her a better than outside chance of winning the championship. The other members of the English squad are Mrs. Peggy Saunders, Mrs. B. C. Coveil, Mrs. Phoebe Watson, Mrs. Dorothy Sherbrooke Barrow and Mrs. D. A. Alston.

In the American lists are Miss Wills, Mrs. Bundy and Mrs. Malory as well as such stars as Helen Jacobs, ranked second to Miss Wills; Edith Cross of San Francisco; Mary Greif of Kansas City; Marjorie Gladman of Santa Monica; Mrs. L. A. Harper of San Francisco; Sarah Paley, of Boston, who captured the eastern grass court women's singles title yesterday.

POLOISTS PLAY FOR NATIONAL CROWN

Midwicks, California, Win Intercircuit Championship At Chicago

Chicago—(AP)—Headed by the Midwick club of California, national inter-circuit titleholders, eight of the best polo teams in the country today were after the United States Polo association twelve goal championship. The tournament, Chicago's second of national importance within two weeks was divided between the Oak Brook and Onwentsia club fields.

Today's matches were between the Oak Brook four horsemen, and Fort Benning, Ga., and Fort Leavenworth, Kas., and Detroit, with the former playing at Oak Brook, and the Kansans at Detroit at Onwentsia. The twelve goal tournament is not a handicap event, all teams playing from scratch. Besides the four scheduled for today, Oak Brook, Du Page, Midwick Club, Fort Hoie, Md., and Onwentsia clubs are entered.

With the aid of a four-goal handicap the Midwicks defeated the Oak Brook club, 10 to 9, for the inter-circuit

START CADDY TOURNEY AT BUTTE DES MORTS

Forty-five caddies at Buttes des Morts golf club took off Monday morning in the qualifying round of the annual caddy tournament. The low 16 youngsters will be entered for the championship and will play their matches during the next week or ten days.

Joe Jacobs, Herr Max's manager, yesterday said a contract with Hubert Fugazy, over which the German had into difficulty with the New York commission, would be fulfilled but that Phil Scott, of England, would not do as an opponent.

That saved him the ignominy of stretching his long length on the bloody canvass.

The second was somewhat different. Campillo, got his long right crook on Tom's body and raised cruel welts on the whitened skin.

Heekey bared in relentlessly on Tom Campillo's best socks with admirable courage.

Heekey took the play away from Campillo time and again throughout the succeeding rounds and it was only a question whether bull dog courage could withstand brawn and weight. The doctory little gladiator carried the fight to his opponent from heel to chin with resounding ovehand left to the angular jaw.

Campillo knew he was in a fight and was mighty glad when the referee aded Heekey to hold his feet and directed him to his corner, a beaten but glorious fighter.

But a few seconds remained for the closing of the ninth round but bull dog courage could not carry Heekey any further. He was out from exhaustion and the effects of a bad body battering.

BADGER GRIDDERS HAVE STRONG CARD FOR FALL SEASON

Will Play Three Conference, One Intersectional Opponent

MADISON — Three conference games, one intersectional engagement and a double header comprise the list of football attractions scheduled to be played at home this fall by the University of Wisconsin. Badger fans who followed their team through a successful season a year ago have indicated their enthusiasm for the 1929 schedule in ticket orders already submitted.

Opening a week earlier than customary, the Cardinal eleven goes into action on Sept. 23, against two formidable college opponents. Only members of the varsity squad will be used in this twin bill. The Wisconsin "vars" will not play their first game until Oct. 5. South Dakota State and Ripon College are the opponents in the double header.

One week later, Oct. 5, Coach Thistlethwaite's Badgers have their first of many difficult assignments. Colgate University will come west to play an intersectional game at Camp Randall stadium. The experts say that Andy Kerr will have as great a team this year as those powerful eleven playing for Colgate before the war. Colgate has never lost to a Western conference school on the gridiron.

The high spot in the early schedule will be reached on Oct. 12, when Coach Thistlethwaite sends his Badgers against Northwestern for the first time since his departure from the Evanston school. Thistlethwaite himself has selected the Wildcats with Minnesota as a favorite to finish at the top of the conference. Dick Hanley's 1929 machine will undoubtedly be the strongest seen at Evanston since 1925.

The next conference contest at home follows the Northwestern game by two weeks. On the intervening Saturday Wisconsin will journey to Soldiers Field to battle Notre Dame. Iowa will appear here against the Badgers on Oct. 26, in the annual Dad's Day attraction. Capt. Gussow and his Hawks 1926 to be just as strong as last year, winning led the league at the halfway mark.

Homecomers will see Wisconsin's final appearance at Camp Randall when the Cardinals meet Jimmie Fehlan's Purdue aggregation. Nov. 2 is the date when Glen Thistlethwaite's boys will attempt to avenge the 19 to 19 tie which kept them from a title last fall. After the fracas with the Boilemakers, the Badgers wind up with Chicago at the Midway and Minnesota at Minneapolis.

SCHMELING RETURNING TO NEW YORK CITY

Chicago—(AP)—His barnstorming trip, which led him through 26 states, at an end, Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, today turned his face toward New York where his status in the boxing business as far as New York is concerned will be determined by the state athletic commission.

Joe Jacobs, Herr Max's manager, yesterday said a contract with Hubert Fugazy, over which the German had into difficulty with the New York commission, would be fulfilled but that Phil Scott, of England, would not do as an opponent.

That saved him the ignominy of stretching his long length on the bloody canvass.

Bruins Beat Giants 1-0 In Pitching Duel Between Malone And Larry Benton

Yankees And Athletics Both Beaten; Babe Gets 33rd Homer

Shadows of another baseball era were called by back to the Polo Grounds yesterday by the finesse of two of the younger set with a lively ball, snipping at batters from a distance of sixty feet and six inches. It will be many an afternoon before major league fans see a better pitched game than the one Perce Lay Malone and the Cubs won from Larry Benton and the Giants by a margin of 1-0.

The Chicago speed-baller held command of his game at all times, and after he finally received the suppage of one run in the seventh, he actually seemed to have an impenetrable lead. Malone gave up five hits to only four by Benton, but only once were the Giants able to put two of them together in any one inning. This was in the third when Roush and Terry singled, but Malone got Ott on a fly to Stephenson for the final out. Malone passed only one man, and struck out seven. Only one runner got as far as third base on him, and two were out at the time.

The Cubs gave Malone his winning margin in the seventh when Guyler left with a double and scampers the rest of the way around on successive outfield sacrifices by the Messrs. Stephenson and Heathcote. As the Pirates were idle the Bruins extended their lead to eight full games.

ROBINS 3, CARDS 2
In games of interest chiefly to the cities concerned, Brooklyn entertained Flatbush with a 3 to 2 victory over the fallen Cardinals and the Braves just outlasted the Reds to win by 10 to 9 at Boston. Watson Clark outpitched Jess Haines in the Flatbush brawl, and Johnny Fradrick batted home the winning run with a homer and two doubles.

Harry Seibold got credit for the victory at Boston where almost all of Jack Hendrick's pitching staff was involved on the losing end. Hank Gowdy, star of the Braves' 1914 world series triumph but inactive for five major league seasons, forsook the bench for a day to pound Cincinnati pitchers for four hits.

The Athletics will have to do with a thirteen-game lead over the Yankees for at least another day. Two home runs and a double by Jimmy Fox failed to save Moose Grove in pitchers' battle against Sammy Gray at St. Louis yesterday, and the Browns won by 4 to

Cleveland's Spurt Is American League Sensation

BY JOHN B. FOSTER
Copyright 1929

NEW YORK — The Cleveland club has provided the sensation for the second half of the American league race this year. The team has been climbing ever since it was balanced. The arrangement of Gardner at shortstop and Urban Hodapp at second base is the best foundation for the infield grouping the team has had.

With Bib Falk playing admirably in the outfield, that section of the Cleveland team yields honors to no body. Ed Morgan the rightfield tender is lead off man. He seemed very good last year. He is better this year. And what is good news for Cleveland he promises to be even better next year.

Falk should have been the leading outfielder of the American league when he played with Chicago. Somehow he did not make the grade. It

PLANS BEING MADE AT WASHINGTON FOR MUSEUM OF RADIO

Will Depict Evolution Of Apparatus From Marconi To Present Day

BY ROBERT MACK
(Copyright, 1929, by Cons. Press)

Washington — Plans for the creation of a radio museum, in which would be exhibited historical apparatus depicting the evolution of radio from Marconi's first transmitter to the present day 100,000 watt sets that carried around the world, are going forward in Washington.

Without advance notice, officials of the Smithsonian Institution and other federal agencies identified with radio have organized a committee to arrange for the collection of the apparatus. The Radio Corporation of America, which possesses a vast amount of equipment of the early radio days, is cooperating with the federal agencies.

At the first informal meeting, presided over by Captain S. C. Hooper, director of naval communications, it was unanimously agreed that the history of radio should be perpetuated in graphic form by exhibition of the equipment evolved by pioneers. The Smithsonian Institution it was stated by C. U. Mitman, of its staff, is anxious to obtain a historical exhibit of radio and will cooperate to the utmost in its collection.

It was disclosed at this meeting that a large amount of antiquated radio material is held by the navy department in Washington and will have to be disposed of as of no other value. Moreover, Captain Hooper said there is other radio equipment, valuable for historical purposes but useless for actual service, at other navy yards throughout the country, at army depots and at the bureau of standards.

was his own fault. His temperament wouldn't let him do it.

Earl Averill, one of the Pacific coast youngsters who has made good, was a good buy for Cleveland. He teams up well with Roy Johnson, who also came from San Francisco. Lew Fonseca has been a surprise. He is not the best first baseman in major league baseball but what can a manager do but play an infielder who is batting .365. Cincinnati let Fonseca down and Cincinnati could have used him to good purpose each season since they let him go. Cincinnati seems to have a bent for letting the wrong players go.

Luke Sewell has not been having a very good year but he is getting better. The Cleveland team has dropped off from his 1928 form but even at that he is doing better than the prophets would admit earlier in the season.

The pitchers, of course, are suffering from the bunnings they got earlier in the season, when the Cleveland team was not nearly what it is now.

Walter Miller is the leader. Some of the players say that Wesley Ferrell may become another Cy Young. Cleveland fans love to compare budding players to old Cy, who walked into Cleveland one afternoon, a perfect stranger. He struck out Pop Anson and won from Chicago all in one afternoon and never stepped backward from that time on.

Joe Shaube is not the success he was heralded to be. It may be that he has pitched too long in one city. Willis Hudlin should be better in 1930. John Miljus has earned his salary, which means that he has about broken even on victories and defeats. Hollaway did not bring much to Cleveland with him. It was a pitiful trade.

The team will almost surely finish in third place — disasters expected. They have shown pep in leaping ahead while their nearest rivals, the St. Louis Browns, have dropped off in both pep and league standing. Detroit does not seem to be able to do anything about it as the team has no pitchers who are worth anything.

WET WEATHER INJURES BURLEY TOBACCO CROP

Lexington, Ky. (AP)—The burley tobacco crop, one of the chief sources of farm revenue in this section, has been reduced approximately 10 percent by heavy rains, says officials of the State College of Agriculture.

Angular leaf spot, or rust, a fungus growth that attacks tobacco leaves during wet weather, spreads rapidly during a rainy spell and eats away leaves of the plant. As a result, lower prices are paid for the tobacco.

The section around Lexington is the largest burley tobacco producing country in the world. Tobacco, however, has not been the only crop damaged by rains. Hay, wheat, and oats suffered heavily.

The shortest distance across the United States from coast to coast is between San Diego, Calif., and Charleston, S. C. It is 2,152 miles long.

RADIOMANIA By Dorothy Urfur

ANGER OF CAT CAUSES EMOTIONAL FINDINGS

Boston (AP)—Cats that changed from "friendly and playful creatures" to a "state of chronic rage" have been used by two British medical investigators to increase man's knowledge of the sources of some emotional disturbances.

The investigations were reported today by Dr. J. F. Fulton and Dr. P. D. Ingraham of Oxford to the Thirteenth International Physiological congress at Harvard Medical school.

The cats spit, scratched and bit when their backs were stroked, and this fundamental alteration in disposition was found due to slight injuries at the base of the brain. The injuries were, however, not in the portion of the brain known to control emotions. The scientists concluded that the emotions were affected because the path through which they are mostly controlled lies in the region of the base of the brain, and this path had been cut by the injuries.

They reported the belief that accidental injuries affecting the base of the brain release certain emotional centers from control of the frontal lobes of the brain.

EARLY STARTING DATE BEST FOR EGG CONTEST

East Lansing, Mich. (AP)—The ninth international egg-laying contest at Michigan state college will start Oct. 1, 1929, instead of Nov. 1.

The earlier starting date is being adopted says Prof. C. G. Card, chief poultryman, so that contestants may ship their pullets to the contest before they come into production.

He has observed that most pullets which are laying at the time of shipment suffer a setback and much time is lost before complete recovery has been effected.

RADIO SHOW MARKS PASSING OF BATTERY OPERATED MACHINES

Not A Single Of The Oldest Type Of Receivers Shown At Exhibition

BY BEN G. KLINE
Copyright 1929 By Cons. Press

San Francisco—Complete and final passage of battery-operated radio receiving sets, so far as the industry is concerned, is being marked by the sixth annual Pacific coast radio show, the industry's exhibition of the season in the country.

Actually all manufacturers of importance will have equipment on display at the civic auditorium here and the show means the definite end of the old time there will not be a single battery-operated set. One will even have to look diligently to find such accessories as eliminators and automatic battery chargers that a year or two ago were being placed on the market in such great quantities.

To celebrate passage of the D. C. set the industry's local association has arranged to make a great fun of it by the display of receivers which dealers have taken in during the last few years as "trade ins." Out of the big volume of such obsolete equipment sets which are still workable have been salvaged and will be distributed among charity agencies. The others will be paraded through the streets before being burned as the opening event of the show.

CHAMBER WARNS OF BOGUS SALESMEN

Asks Housewives Look For Agents Of Alleged St. Louis Company

Appleton housewives have been warned by the chamber of commerce to be on the lookout for a man representing himself as an agent of the Faber-Wheeler company, St. Louis, Mo., who makes what he terms a special advertisement of three garments for the price of one at a total price of $12.95.

The salesman who goes under the name W. H. Vernon collects a deposit of $1.00 for the merchandise and then issues a printed receipt for the price of the company, at which time the receipt is returned to the salesman. The receipt is then used as a receipt for the purchase of the merchandise.

Reflecting the public's interest in what a receiving set brings in as well as what it looks like, there are two sound-proof booths in the exhibit room for demonstrations. There are the usual arrangements for studio broadcasting at the show, but on Tuesday night, 7:30 to 8:30 P. M. the cost time, this will be of unusual interest.

WENN, the general electric company's new short wave station at Oakland will broadcast a program of music and addresses for the world to hear. Arrangements have been made for the rebroadcasting of the program in several foreign countries whose consuls here will speak briefly in their own tongues.

APPLETON SOFT BALL

TEAMS TAKE 2 GAMES

New London—New London soft ballers came out at the short end of the "three" games with Appleton teams on Sunday morning. Krauses lost a double header with the Tuttle Pressers by 2 to 1 and 8 to 0 scores. Carlsson pitched good ball but the Pressers took advantage of every break. Krauses hit the ball high and far out but the Appleton fielders snared every thing.

Bordens and Hamiltons joined forces to beat the Pettibone-Peabody team by a 6 to 5 score. Both pitchers had plenty of speed but errors in the Pett infield lost them the game. Schoepke, of the New Londoners had a perfect batting spree getting two baggers each time at bat.

The best stunt of all three games was put on by Pett's center fielder, who ran across the field slide on his stomach for ten feet and came up with the ball in his hands.

MOTHER NATURE'S CURIO SHOP

Criminals Impressed By Lesson Of Condemned Men

Frankfort—(P)—Once a week the silent men and women expiating their crimes against society in Kentucky penal institutions hear a practical lesson in the folly of law violation.

In every penal institution and jail in the state they hear the story of two men who transgressed the law against murder and soon will pay the penalty the state exacts by forfeiting their lives.

It is not because of any interest in the brutal crimes but execution of a method conceived by Governor Sampson to impress law violators through concrete evidence, that crime does not pay.

It is his proclamation, read to the prisoners each week through which the story of the two convicted murders is unfolded and will be repeated until the two men die in the electric chair at the state prison September 13.

In his proclamation, the governor says: "May this lesson be deeply engraven upon the hearts and minds of the criminally inclined, that they may not forget it. Virtue must be regarded for its priceless worth. It is deplorable that men living in the greatest country should violate the rules of society and make it necessary to pay the extreme penalty and die an ignominious death on the gallows or in the electric chair. Respect for, and obedience to all laws is essential to peace, prosperity and happiness. The rules of society must be observed, the laws of our land must be obeyed. The citizens who are criminally included must learn to respect both the rules of society and our laws."

Carl Hord, one of the condemned, killed Marion A. George, a Louisville merchant in a robbery December 13, 1928. Charles Mitra of St. Louis, an accomplice, already has been executed.

Ivan Hutsell, the other man awaiting execution was convicted of murder.

Among those from out of town attending the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Max Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Luker and family of Eureka, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Carpenter, Omro, Mrs. Roy Carpenter and daughter Meryl, Oshkosh; Mrs. Frank Kadel, daughter Julia, sons Frank and William, Neenah, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tauble, New London; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fogant and family of Marinette.

LEAGUE LEADERS ARE DEFEATED BY KAW NINE, 6 TO 3

Kaukauna Finally Takes Holders Into Camp After Two Defeats

Kaukauna—You can't keep a good team down. After being beaten twice this season by the Kimberly-Little Chute baseball team, Kaukauna made a strong comeback and turned back the invaders with a 9 to 6 score in a hectic fracas here Sunday afternoon. Referee, Kaw pitcher, came through with flying colors by holding the pace setters to seven hits and three runs. Two home runs featured the game, one by Mulry, Kaw short stop, and Len Smith, Kimberly center fielder. Each brought in a run.

The game was close and Kim-Little Chute led the Kaws by one run at the eighth stanza. Pocan then eased up enough to enable the locals to net four runs and win the game. Kaukauna scored first with two runs in the third inning and Kim-Little Chute tied the score in the fifth stanza. They went into the lead in the seventh when E. Versteegen, who got to first on an error, scored on a wild pitch.

Les Smith had a perfect batting average for the day getting two doubles and two walks. "Shorty" Wenzel did his bit of work when he knocked in the first two runs in the game. He made one triple, one out and received two walks. Lemmers was the heavy hitter for the Kim-Chutes getting three hits out of four trips to the plate.

Three hits and a walk in the first inning made things look bad for Kaukauna but Referee retired the invaders without a score. The score stood nothing to nothing until the third frame. R. Versteegen singled and was followed by Les Smith with a double. Wenzel hammered out a three base hit to bring in two scores.

HITS HOME RUN
In the first of the fifth Lemmers singled and Len Smith hit a home run. The score was then tied. In the seventh E. Versteegen reached first when Les Smith missed a high fly to center field. He scored on a wild pitch by Referee. Little Chute then led 3 to 2.

Determined to break the bad luck jinx that always appears when the two old rivals meet Kaukauna came to bat in the last of the eighth inning. R. Versteegen went to first safely when the first baseman muffed a catch. Pocan then walked Les Smith and Wenzel. Versteegen scored on a wild pitch by Pocan and Les Smith scored on a sacrifice hit by Ray Smith. Mulry then slammed out the pill over the right field wall to score Wenzel and himself. Pocan retired and Vander Loop finished the inning without any more hitting. The jinx was broken and Kaukauna won the game nestling on the top of a 6 to 3 count.

MANY BADGERS IN FAVOR OF CHANGE IN CALENDAR PLAN

State Department Has Long List Of Endorsing Wisconsin Firms

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Washington Bureau of Post-Crescent)

Washington—Scores of Wisconsin organizations, business associations, and individuals were placed on record at the state department during the week just ended as favoring a change in the calendar.

The report made by a national committee on calendar simplification headed by George Eastman of Rochester, N. Y. Kodak manufacturer, containing the long list of Wisconsin endorsers of the plan and a smaller list of Wisconsin opponents of any change in the calendar, is to be sent to the League of Nations, which may invite an international conference on calendar simplification. There is a resolution before congress for United States participation in such a conference, which aroused a storm of opposition from Catholic and Jewish religious groups.

The Eastman proposal is for a year of 13 months, each having 28 days, with the first always coming on Sunday, the 13 always coming on Friday, to the distress of the superstitious, and the 28 always coming on Saturday. There is an alternative proposal for a 12-month year, the quarters being equal, with every third month having 31 days and the rest having 30 days.

DAYS ON SAME DATE

The second plan would not place the days of the week on the same date of each month. The advantages to business and industry of the change are that every month would have the same number of workdays, the same number of whole weeks, uniform periods of earning and spending so that comparisons could be better made and clerical work avoided. There would be an extra rest day in the year, the 365th day, which would be the final day of the year, and two extra days on Leap Year, which would be made the 29th day of June, and the new months would be placed between June and July.

Everybody's birthday would be changed. There would be more excuse for a few years for husbands who forget wedding anniversaries and birthdays.

Wisconsin organizations on record in the report as favoring calendar simplification include: Wisconsin-Upper Michigan Florists' association; Central Wisconsin Traffic association; Engineering Society of Wisconsin; Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts and Letters; Wisconsin Implement Dealers' association; Wisconsin Laundry Owners' association; Wisconsin Press association; Wisconsin Retail Furniture Dealers' association; Peshigo Commercial club.

Wisconsin chambers of commerce and boards of trade favoring change in the calendar include those at Clintonville, De Pere, Fond du Lac, Monroeville.

FAVOR CHANGE

Local business organizations in Wisconsin favoring a change include: Engineers' Society of Milwaukee; Farmers' Co-operative Creamery association, Black River Falls; Hoard Central Farmers' Co-operative Cheese Factory association; Hotel association, Milwaukee; Ladysmith Civic club; Milwaukee Paint, Oil, and Varnish club; the Seelye Food and Grocery association; Milwaukee Office Managers' association; and the Twin Port Co-operative Dairy association.

Wisconsin Rotary clubs which have gone on record as favoring a calendar simplification include those at Burlington, Eagle River, Gillett, Melrose, New London, Wausau, Watertown, and West Allis.

Other individual and corporation endorsers in Wisconsin include: Ralph W. Cary, president of Nite-Eyes, Inc., Waukesha; Theodore Johnson, secretary, J. I. Case Threshing Machine company, Racine; Alfred J. Klebeker, president, National Enameling and Stamping company, Milwaukee; Ernest Maier, president, Cullucotton Products company, Neenah, which now uses 23-day periods in keeping its business accounts; Charles W. Nash, president, Nash Motor company, Kenosha; Nat Stone, president, the Boston Store, Milwaukee; Walter Kasten, president, First National bank, Milwaukee; Walter Schroeder, president, Schroeder Hotel company, Milwaukee; A. F. James, president, Northwestern National Insurance company, Milwaukee; and Edwin E. Frost, director of the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago, at Williams Bay, Wis. Frost says the 13-month calendar would greatly aid scientific observations and educational institutions.

Wisconsin opponents of any change in the calendar include: Baldwin Co-operative Creamery association; the Marshfield chamber of commerce; the Duluth-Superior District Credit association; Newry Dairy and Creamery association; Rotary clubs at Clintonville and Waupun; Ship Masters association, Milwaukee; and the Springbrook Cooperative Cheese Produce association.

Fred M. Wilcox, chairman of the Wisconsin Industrial commission, was a member of the special labor committee working with the national committee on calendar simplification.

POSTAL CHANGE

Edward C. Schwarz will keep his position as postmaster at Blackwell, Forest-co, Wis., although the post office was relegated to the fourth class on July 1.

Walter L. Norris has been appointed postmaster at Randall, Burnett-co, to succeed Raymond G. Wagner, deceased. Norris has been serving as acting postmaster since the death of Postmaster Wagner, and has now been given the regular appointment as fourth class office.

Robert S. Allen, former state capital reporter for the Wisconsin State Journal, and publicity manager of the Ekern campaign for governor, returned from Mexico last week where he covered the Institute of cultural relations for the Christian Science Monitor, and then went to Boston, Mass., for conferences with

DISCOVER WHEATS WHICH CAN RESIST ATTACK OF RUSTS

Find Encourages U. S. Wheat Growers Whose Annual Loss Is Great

Washington—(P)—Dr. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of the Canadian department of agriculture, is quoted in Ottawa as announcing the development of wheats which can resist rust.

Seed will not be available in large quantities for two or three years, but it is expected that eventually the new wheat will save Canadian farmers millions of dollars every year.

The announcement is of deep interest to wheat specialists in the United States, where black stem rust causes probably greater loss to the spring wheat crop than all other diseases combined. The federal plant-disease survey estimates that stem rust has caused losses of spring and winter wheat during recent years ranging from 655,000 bushels in 1918 to about 180,000,000 in 1916, with an average annual loss of nearly 38,000,000 bushels in the 13 north-central states.

Efforts to halt the tremendous destruction include eradication of the common barberry, host plant of black stem rust, the growing of rust-resistant varieties, and the use of improved methods of field culture.

Production of varieties resistant to rust is a complex problem, since the disease consists of many biologic forms which differ in their pathogenicity for certain varieties of wheat.

That explains why the same variety may be resistant when grown in one locality and susceptible when grown in another, or why a variety may be resistant in the same locality in one year and susceptible in the next.

It is obvious, plant pathologists say, that if wheat is to be resistant in the field it must be resistant to all biologic forms present in the locality in which it is to be grown. Whether the Canadians have accomplished this feat remains to be determined. Until that time there is a question whether the wheat, although resistant in Canada's spring wheat provinces, would be resistant in the United States.

TOTES TINY BOTTLE 'OF LIQUID DEATH' ABOUT IN POCKET

Chicago—(P)—The little bottle W. B. Martin was carrying on the hip last night was potent dynamite. Still, it looked innocent enough.

He found it in the basement of the drugstore where he works. He put it in his pocket and went for an automobile ride.

The contents of the bottle got a thorough shaking, for with all respect to the department of streets and alleys some of the city's thoroughfares are not everything they might be.

Riding hither and thither, Martin casually bethought himself of the bottle. What might it contain? Of a sudden there came a paralyzing thought. For a moment he hesitated. He drove cautiously to a police station where the sergeant took a quick glance and doused the bottle in water.

"I congratulate you," the sergeant told Martin, "in being able to be up and about. At a rough estimate there is in that bottle enough nitroglycerine to render you, I should say, virtually extinct."

complicated this feat remains to be determined. Until that time there is a question whether the wheat, although resistant in Canada's spring wheat provinces, would be resistant in the United States.

The United States department of agriculture has had varied success in developing resistance in pure strains and in crosses but has been unable to find a wheat uniformly resistant in all regions in all seasons. Twenty-one biologic forms of rust have been found in the upper half of the Mississippi valley. A winter wheat, Kanred, is resistant to two of these forms and immune from 11.

One of the chief difficulties is to find a hardy wheat that at the same time is prolific and of high protein content. Kota apparently is highly resistant in the spring wheat areas, but its straw is weak.

SURVEY SHOWS BIG BUILDING DECREASE DURING LAST MONTH

Milwaukee Is One Of 13 Cities Which Had Gain In Construction

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
Copyright 1929 by Cons. Press
New York—From two sources today it was indicated that the volume of building construction in July was materially smaller than in the same month of 1928.

The national survey prepared by S. C. Straus and company revealed a loss of 13 per cent last month compared with last year while Dun's review stated that July's projects for new construction involved an estimated expenditure about 20 per cent below the amount for the same period in 1928.

The heaviest shrinkages were in the cities of New York, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Rochester, Cincinnati, Portland, Oregon, Pittsburgh, Houston, Seattle, and Indianapolis. These centers where construction activity was in excess of last year was Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, Washington, D. C., San Francisco, Newark, Oklahoma City, Des Moines, New Orleans, Worcester, Mass., Jersey City, Cleveland and Milwaukee, the last named city showing a gain over July 1928 of considerably more than 100 per cent.

SHOWS BIG INCREASE

The total volume of construction planned in July was $239,158,107. In the same month last year it was $222,612,152. The amount was 8 per cent greater than in June this year.

In general building permits this summer appears to have contracted more in the large centers of population than elsewhere. The smallest decreases were in the western states and on the Pacific coast. The largest gains on the other hand, were in New England and in the middle Atlantic states.

It was pointed out in one of the reviews that while unemployment in the large cities is rather pronounced, "there is virtually no labor trouble

Your Question And Its Answer

J.A. Panneck, D.C.
Palmer Chiropractor

QUESTION: What can be done for bronchitis? I am bothered every winter. My doctor calls it bronchitis and prescribes for same. I see no improvement and if anything I am worse. Can you help me?—W.L.G.

ANSWER: Bronchitis usually caused by a subluxation of the first dorsal vertebrae. The subluxation pressure upon the nerves having to do with the calorific function, and so interferes with its expression that excessive heat or inflammation results. The relief is best obtained through removing the cause by means of spinal adjustment. For quick relief of your annoying trouble see me at once.

QUESTION: I have been taking adjustments from a chiropractor who uses other adjuncts and charges me for them. Is there any benefit in them? What is your opinion?—H.W.

ANSWER: When a so-called chiropractor does anything, I repeat anything, other than to locate the point or points of pressure upon nerves and remove the same, he is shouting to the world one or more of three things: If he believes in Chiropractic, he admits that he is incapable of administering it and hence is resorting to all manner of substitutes. If he does not believe in the science, he is admitting to the world that he is willfully cheating his fellow man since he is pretending to be what he is not. If he believes in Chiropractic and honestly believes he is practicing Chiropractic, he is just plainly ignorant as to what the science is. So, no matter how you look at it, to claim to be a Chiropractor and practise other than true Chiropractic is to admit to a lack of competency, dishonesty or ignorance. This is strong language. However, if you will all honestly analyze the situation, you will come to the same conclusion.

QUESTION: I am a man thirty years of age, working every day but soon I will have to quit because of my health. I am in a rundown condition, doctored for years with drugs and I am no better. Can you give me some advice?—J.F.S.

ANSWER: I certainly can. The human brain generates life energy. Mental impulse flows from the brain through the nerves to all organs and parts of the body, giving to each and all their life, or power to perform their work. A normal flow of current to all parts means perfect health. An imperfect flow of current to any part means weakness and disease in that part. Therefore I suggest that you consult me at once.

TUBERCULOSIS WORSE AMONG YOUNG GIRLS

Atlantic City—(P)—Tuberculosis among young persons here can be traced to 18 and 40 than does any other disease, said Dr. Kendall Emerson today on the eve of the National Tuberculosis association annual meeting here.

"And statistics show," he said, "that it is increasing among adolescent girls, who have a death rate in the building industry." Prices of building materials show little change and have been well stabilized.

twice as high as boys of the same age.

Dr. Emerson is managing director of the association. Records to show that the tuberculosis death rate has been cut two and a half times since the association was organized here 25 years ago will be given at the three-day meeting beginning tomorrow.

There were less than 100 tuberculosis sanatoria 25 years ago, compared with more than 600 today. About 1,500 persons are expected to attend the sessions, as against 197 who participated in the initial meeting here.

Fifty-eight of this original 197 have promised to attend this year.

Chapter 18
A RING IS DISCOVERED
ND what," inquired Sir Richard, "what of yourself, Black Nick; how goeth thiney these days?"
"Why so, sir?"
"It can have but one end for thee, fool-Nick. I fear. You're too good a man to end in a noose."
"Lord, sir," said Nick, with reassuring smile, "two don't all get 'topped.' Captain Archer, three years ago, made a name and a fortune and retired. You'll mind Captain Archer, called Captain Midnight, sir? but why trouble about me?"
"Perhaps because you once saved my life, because thou'rt my friend."
"Sir, you honour me!" Here was silence awhile, Sir Richard scowling down at the toe of his boot, while Black Nick watched him with eyes of a dog-like devotion; and ever and anon rose a shuddering cry.
"Nick!" exclaimed Sir Richard suddenly. "Who is it cries out yonder?"
"Only poor Jimmy in his gibbet."
"Ha, Nick, 'tis plaguey ill to think such miserable end may come to myself, one day."
"Lord not, not you, sir."
"Who shall prove my innocence?"
"Yourself, sir, your friends, - a alibi!"
"All impossible, Nick .... circumstance doth forbid!"
"May I ask - what?"
"You may, but I cannot tell - even to you -" Sir Richard paused suddenly, for a large pewter plate in distant corner appeared to leap in air and fell clattering. Again it rose slowly on end, poised itself and feebly subsided.
"That's two!" quoth Nick. "should be three for a friend! There be somebody above us don't signal true? So saying, he arose, took his pistol and cocked it thoughtfully. "Sir, there be something amiss and I be a-going up to see. Bide you here and have your guns ready, but don't stir unless ye hear a shot." Black Nick leaped lightly up the two steps and vanished.
Sir Richard drew his pistols, cocked and laid them ready to hand then, rising, crossed to where lay this strange, pewter plate and saw it was attached to a cord that led through a hole in the pallid floor. For some while he heard nothing save the faint, recurrent creak of the dead man's gibbet above. At last he was aware of other sounds growing slowly louder; there was a stumble of feet and a small man stood blinking in the light, one hand clenched upon Nick's arm, the other dangling and dropping blood.
"Sir .... they call me .... 'The Parson, I give ye hearty greeting." "At your service," answered Sir Richard.
"A bullet through the arm, sir," Nick explained, reaching sponge and basin from a shelf.
"Have ye any scissors?" inquired Sir Richard, tucking up his ruffles. "I'll slit up his sleeve and -"
"No .... no!" gasped the Parson. "tis good coat this .... took it from .... a bishop .... only last week." He arose and contrived to struggle out of the garment; then, sinking feebly into the arm-chair.
"Spoiled, alack!" he sighed. "Ruined, and fitted me like my skin!" Wash it for me, Nick."
Black Nick washed, anointed and bound up the ugly hurt; while Sir Richard viewed this man whose every ready pistol-hand had made his name a terror far and wide.
A slim, small, strange man was he, black-browed and of saturnine visage. Meeting Sir Richard's glance he nodded towards Nick's solemn face.
"How now, Nick?" quoth he. "You'll be thinking by tonight's work I've more blood on my soul as well as my coat - eh, lad."

"I'm thinking you're too spy wt your barkers, Rob. How came ye by this hole 'y your arm?"
"I met a young strapping 'other side o' Lewes Pike 'Stand' says I. 'The devil' says he, so I let fly and down goes his horse. 'Now the favour o' your purse,' says I. 'Take a bullet!' says he and, firing from the dust, wings me. Then my other barker mases, folk come running, so it's whip and spur. . . . Never a guinea and my good coat spoiled! . . . There's poor James now - hark to him. He sounds devilish uneasy tonight! Ay, I must out to him; give me the Book!"
Nick gave him the Book, a small, thick, much tattered volume, whereupon the Galloping Parson struggled to unwilling legs and stumbled upon his way.
"Nick, what's he after?" inquired Sir Richard.
"Your honour, he be gone up for to read a verse and say a prayer over poor Jimmy."
"Doth he know me, think ye, Nick? Didst mention my name?"
"Nay, sir, I told him you were friend o' mine."
The Galloping Parson reappeared after some while, blinking down at them from the narrow opening which served as doorway.
"And now, Nick, lad, gimme a hand w' my toddling cheats and I'll to roost!"
"You stare at me, Sir Richard," quoth Rob, with sudden smile.
"And you know my name, it seems," answered Sir Richard, smiling also.
"Nay, sir, I but guess at it."
"You guess rightly, but how?"
"By seeing two things found together in a little wood, sir, your signet-ring and the body of a murdered man."
"He - you saw them found?"
"With these two eyes, sir, I chanced to be hiding in that wood . . . and they were found by a lady and gentleman a horseback."
"Zounds!" exclaimed Sir Richard, in frowning perplexity. "Now who should they be?"
"Sir, I heard her name the gentleman Captain Despard."
Sir Richard started.
"Despard?" he repeated. "Then she could only have been -"
Sir Richard was dumb awhile, and when at last he spoke, his voice was hoarse, his speech halting: "Who first . . . touched . . . my ring?"
"Twas the gentleman took it up and instantly knew it for yours, sir."
"Yes, and . . . and then?"
"He gave it to the lady."
"Why?"
"Because she pleaded, begged for it."
"She begged for it?"
"Ay, she did, sir. 'For,' says she, 'it must not be found! And on my life,' cried the Galloping Parson, 'tis known many a poor wretch hanged on less evidence.'"
Helen pleaded to hide this ring - what is the meaning? An explanation is in tomorrow's chapter.

NEW COAL GAS METHOD
Budapest - Prof. Joseph Varga of the Budapest Technical University has devised a method of extracting gasoline from coal which is said to extract from 60 to 70 per cent of the available product. The process is supposed to differ entirely from American and German methods.

STRICT ON MOVIES
London - British movie producers have many things to contend with. The British Board of Film Censors, for instance, has put thumbs down on companionate marriage scenes, breaking bottles over people's heads and reference to the Prince of Wales. In 1928 eight films out of 1947 submitted were banned and more than 300 others changed.

Try This on Your Aquaplane

Want a thrill? Try this some time in your favorite bathing waters. Walter "Fuzzy" Gibbs and Josephine Bowman, of Louisville, Ky., held this difficult pose while riding an aquaplane on the Ohio river for three miles while the speedboat towing them was going 35 miles an hour. It's not so easy, but plenty thrilling.

Talks To Parents

BY ALICE JUDSON PEALE
"Here, Cecily, come in and say 'how do you do' to Mr. Easton." Cecily wriggled, muttered a "how do you do" and immediately picked up a book in which she became deeply interested.

Mr. Easton was an old friend of the family, but never did Cecily show him more than the scantest courtesy. After he had gone her father spoke to him.

"Why can't you be more cordial to Mr. Easton? He's so fond of you and he's always bringing you candy. You hardly even say 'thank you' when you take it. Don't you like him?"

"No."

"Why don't you like him? He likes you."

"I don't know why. I just don't. 'But, Cecily, he's a very good friend of ours, and he's a very interesting man. He's been all over the world and he can tell wonderful stories.'"

"He never tells me anything interesting. Just talks silly. I don't like him. He thinks he has to talk to me as if I was a baby. He makes me tired."

Don't try to make your child do more than go through the ordinary forms of courtesy with those people who have not won his confidence. Your visitors must stand on their own merits. They must win your child's friendship just as they have won yours.

If they offer nothing but candy and the sugary teasing type of conversation which apparently constitutes a popular idea of approach to children, it is no wonder they find their overtures rejected.

The most popular visitors are those who treat children on a basis of equality, who give their real selves in conversation. Well meaning people who try to bribe their way into children's hearts never get far.

THREE ASSEMBLYMEN GO TO FREERPORT EXERCISES

Chicago — The round-the-world flight of the Graf Zeppelin is just further proof to Glenn Voliva, overseer of Zion City, that the earth is flat. If it were a revolving globe, he argues, Tokio would spin away when the airship tried to land there.

Washington — The girls seem to be responsible. Federal taxes on cigarettes have jumped $40,205,715 in a year.

New York — An electric chair for mosquitoes is the invention of a New Jerseyite. Harry Elkoft has fashioned a hidden electric wire in a sugary dish which is expected to shock the pests to death when and if they alight to eat.

New York — The Ovimundu, natives of the west coast of Africa, regard speech-recording devices as black magic. W. D. Humby, leader of the Frederick H. Rawson, Field Museum Ethnological expedition, has found great difficulty in inducing them to talk and sing into recording instruments. They pose for pictures readily.

Malvern, England — Modest G. B. S.'s cries of "author, author" proved nothing but vocal exercise for an audience of journalists at a special matinee over the new play, "The Apple Cart." George Bernard Shaw was in the orchestra circle during the three hour performance, but when admirers wanted him to take a bow, he had disappeared.

POLKA DOT GAINS FAVOR OF MILADY

Newest Dresses At Fashion- able Centers Indicate Future Trend

BY AILEEN LAMONT
(Copyright, 1929, by Cons. Press)

New York — The gangsters of the present day put their victims "on the spot." But the dressmakers of today put the spot on their victims. The polka dot designs are assuredly going to have vogue during the coming six months. This has already been established by the newer dresses seen at Newport and at Cowes in England and Cap d'Antibes in France. The polka dot designs are not regular and they are not printed but embroidered.

There have always been belted corsets but now we have sashed countesses and hosts of belted commoners. The uneven waistline has proved the uneven scarf, which comes down in front in a point and then raises and falls to a lower point in the back. The belts are fastened at the normal waistline in front but are allowed to fall much lower in the back.

REPORT FORMATION OF NEW STEAMBOAT FIRM

Seattle —(AP)—The Post-Intelligencer today said that Frank McKeown, 29, has obtained support of financiers here and in San Francisco for an $18,000,000 steamship company.

McKeown will incorporate the company within a few days, the newspaper said, refusing until then to name his backers.

His plan, McKeown was quoted as saying, is to establish a freight and passenger steamship line between the Pacific coast and Europe with eight or ten vessels of eleven or twelve thousand tons capacity, each with accommodations for 50 passengers. Whether the ships would be built or purchased from the United States Shipping board was undecided.

While attending the University of Washington McKeown was employed as a clerk in the Pacific Steamship company offices here.

was to reverse. Fashion is following in its footsteps.

For years woolen dresses have been trimmed with silk for contrast and to give individuality. Now the process is reversed. Silk dresses are trimmed with appliques of woolen materials. Usually these match the coat which is worn over the silk dress.

NEW CHARGES LAUNCHED AGAINST THEATRE MAN

Los Angeles —(AP)—The district attorney's office today had three new accusations, in the form of affidavits by young women, against Alexander Pantages, 54-year-old theatre manager, who is charged with criminally attacking Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old dancer. The affidavits, one a 136-page deposition, were offered voluntarily, district Attorney Burton Fitts stated, by girls who formerly were ushers in Pantages' theatre here.

The principal depositions, which Fitts said named other young women to having received attentions similar to those assertedly forced upon Miss Pringle by Pantages, was made by a girl who stated the attempted attack upon her occurred about a year ago. The deposition was dictated by the district attorney. It is not to be disclosed, in the presence of himself and two of his deputies, Harold Jones and Blaney Matthews.

Senators Robert M. La Follette Jr. and the other Wisconsin congressmen will have no appointments to make in West Point next year, as their quotas are full.

DAWES AND PREMIER IN ANOTHER MEETING

Lossiemouth, Scotland —(AP)—Premier MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes renewed their conversation on naval disarmament today at the premier's summer residence here. The American ambassador, who made an overnight trip from London to see Mr. MacDonald, planned to leave this afternoon to visit friends in other parts of Scotland. Mr. Dawes also expects to go to Elgin on Friday when Premier MacDonald is presented with the freedom of that city and then to return to London on Saturday.

UTILITIES LEAD

CURB STOCKS UP

Irregularly Develops With Late Afternoon Profit-Taking

New York.—The curb market moved irregularly higher today, under the leadership of an assortment of utilities and specialties. Profit taking, however, had to be absorbed in considerable volume, as the prospect of somewhat firmer money this week prompted traders to realize on last week's advance. After moving substantially higher during the forenoon, the market faltered in the early afternoon, and several issues slipped back a point or two from their best levels.

International Cigar Machinery was a strong feature, snatching up more than 19 points to a record level at 155, on top of the last week's gain of more than 50. The advance in this issue has paralleled that of American Machine and Foundry, the parent company, on the "big board," and is attributed to growing production of machine-made cigars in an effort to meet cigarette sales competition.

Hood rubber mounted a few points in response to the proposed merger with Goodrich. Anchor Post Fence, Aluminum Co., and Colgate Palmolive were other industrials to meet with moderate demand. Investment trusts generally moved in narrow ranges, but National Investors shot up more than 7 points to another record price. Goldman Sachs and Transamerica were firm.

Utilities displayed revived strength, although they encountered considerable resistance in the early afternoon. Electric Bond and Share, Electric Investors and American Light and Traction, mounted 3 or 4 points. Allied Power and Light and American Superpower made similar gains, but soon lost much of their advances. Commonwealth and Southern, Niagara Huron and United Gas Improvement were steady.

Nevada Electric was a soft spot, falling back a few points, and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore tumbled about 10.

Oils encountered considerable profit-taking on their gains of late last week. Gulf of Pennsylvania was again strong on the prospect of formation of a new Mellon holding company, but Standard of Indiana lost a couple of points.

New York.—Youngstown district iron and steel mills are reported opening at 84 per cent of rated capacity, the lowest point this year. Open hearth schedules continue at 88 per cent, with 44 out of 51 units melting, a decrease of one from the previous week. The Youngstown Sheet and Tube company is averaging 89 per cent, the Sharon Steel Hoop 90 per cent or better and the Newton Steel company at near capacity. The Ohio properties of A. M. Byers and company are operating at 60 per cent.

During the second quarter of 1929, General Motors Corporation sales to overseas dealers amounted to 93,079 cars, as compared with 80,533 in the corresponding period of 1928. For the six months ending June 30, sales amounted to 148,191, as compared with 137,470 in the first six months of last year.

The July daily average world copper production was 5,531 short tons, as against 5,820 in June and 6,561 in April, the record months.

The General Electric Company plans to consolidate its 14 wholesale distributing corporations in the General Electric Supply company, incorporated in Delaware, effective Oct. 1.

The July daily average world copper production was 5,531 short tons, as against 5,820 in June and 6,561 in April, the record months.

The couple disappeared Aug. 8 the next day the boat they had rented was found drifting, and the body of Mrs. Parillo was recovered Friday and her husband's the next day.

A hasty examination by Coroner F. E. Tiron was to the effect that Mrs. Parillo probably had been murdered, but an autopsy in Madison dispelled this opinion. Later, the body of Mr. Parillo was recovered, and authorities said the couple had been drowned accidentally. The bodies have been sent to Chicago for burial.

Baraboo.—(P)—Frank B. Moss, Sauk county attorney, today said the official records in the death of Mr. and Mrs. James Parillo, Chicago in Devil's lake on Aug. 8, probably would be closed at an inquest today. He said the coroner's jury probably would return a verdict of drowning.

CHICAGO STOCKS

FIRM IN TRADING

Auto Accessory And Utilities Show Extensive Strength On Exchange

Chicago.—(P)—Stocks on the Chicago exchange were firm in the early trading. Borg Warner continued its advance of last week, advancing over 2 points from its previous price. Central and Southwest Utilities advanced 11 points at opening to 155 fluctuating during the morning session with a slight downward trend. Chicago Corporation common and preferred both advanced 3 points. Allied Motors, associated industries and Auburn sold higher, Auburn jumping 10 points to 450 on the second block of stock. Houdaille Hershey was up more than 2 points. Iron Fireman advanced more than a point and a half on last week's report of better earnings, and Pines Winterfront added fractionally to last week's advance. Butler Brothers, Utah Radio, Vortex and Westark took small losses.

While not publishing any detailed six months earnings report, the McCarty-Norris Manufacturing company announced today that its net earnings for the first half of this year were 456,000. In the first six months of 1928 the company's net was about $350,000. The Super Mail Corporation has adopted a plan for the purchase of stock by the employees.

BOND MARKET STARTS WEEK MUCH STRONGER

Total sales, 9,714,000. Previous day, 4,231,000. Week ago, 9,096,730. Year ago, 7,059,000. Jan. 1 to date, 1,789,539,000. Same year ago, 2,002,338,000. Same two years ago, 1,653,925,000.

New York.—(P)—The listed bond market started the new week off strong, with the convertibles, particularly the communication issues, advancing in sympathy with the strength of stocks. New highs were established by some of the lenders.

The money situation was unchanged, with call loans renewing at 7 per cent. Time loans held around 8 3/4 to 9 per cent.

Only the convertibles were turned over in volume. American Telephone ran up 9 points to 217, a new high, and International Telephone Convertible 4 1/2 to 184, also a new high. They closed last week at 183 1/2. In the first hour of trading nearly 1,500,000 par value American Telephone 4 1/2s were sold.

Commercial Investment Trust 5 1/2s were strong, equaling their previous high at 105 1/8 on an advance of more than 2 points. American 1 G. Chemical 5 1/2s and American Chain 6s each lost a point. Eastern tubes were displayed by National Radiator 6 1/2s, N. Y. Dock 5s and North American Cement 6 1/2s.

Utilities found an improved market on buying partly attributed to investors who have profited in the sharp gains in the stocks this year. Detroit Edison 5s, General Public Service Corp. 5 1/2s and Federal Light and Traction advanced one to two points. Strength in Public Service of New Jersey of New Jersey sent the 4 1/2 bonds up 3 points.

The rails were firm, but were lightly traded in. Atchafalpa 4 1/2s registered a small gain.
